
39 die in military transport crashes

By The Associated Press

Thirty-nine persons were killed Saturday when two U.S. Air Force C141 transports from McGuire Air Force Base, N.J., crashed about three hours apart, one in England and one in Greenland.

The Military Airlift Command said 21 persons died in the Greenland accident at 10:50 a.m. EDT. Six others survived, although they were burned severely.

The Pentagon said there apparently were no survivors among the 18 persons aboard the plane that crashed in England at 7:45 a.m. EDT.

Military authorities said there was no apparant connection between the crashes of the large four-engine transports.

Pentagon officials said the six survivors of the Greenland crash would be flown to the Army burn center in San Antonio, Tex. They were identified as two Americans, two Danes and two residents of Greenland, a possession of Denmark.

Officials at McGuire said the plane that crashed in Sonderstrom, Greenland, had left the New Jersey base at 8:45 a.m. EDT Friday. The plane that went down at Peterborough, England, had left at 12:30 a.m. EDT Saturday.

"It is believed there is no connection between the two" crashes, said Lt. Col. John B. Richmond, a spokesman at McGuire. And in Washington, a Pentagon spokesman said there was no indication of sabotage.

Authorities launched investigations into both crashes.

The Pentagon said names of those aboard the planes were being withheld until their families could be notified.

The crash in England involved a C141 Starlifter en route to Mildenhall Royal Air Force Base, about 35 miles from the crash site.

Police cordoned off the crash scene, and firemen and emergency workers stood by waiting for the smouldering wreckage to cool.

It was not known immediately whether the four passengers were military or civilians.

"The plane is completely burned out and there could not possibly be any survivors," said one witness to the accident.

Reports from the scene said the plane nosedived into a field. There had been thunderstorms reported in the area.

The aircraft involved in the Greenland crash, from the 438th Military Airlift Wing at McGuire, had just arrived on a flight from Thule Air Base, Greenland, when it "encountered difficulties on landing," the Pentagon said. It did not elaborate on the difficulties.

Greenland radio, monitored in Copenhagen, said the plane skidded on the runway, tipped over on one wing and burst into flames.

After pushing the last girl to shore, Melton went under the water and did not come up.

The Scott County Sheriff's Department was called at 6:30 p.m. and they called the Sikeston Volunteer Emergency Rescue Squad at 7:05 p.m. The body was recovered at 7:30 p.m. in about four feet of water just as the rescue squad arrived.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Monte Johnson was walking down the sidewalk when he found $1 million.

"Of course I was surprised, you don't find a million dollars every day," said Johnson, who found the $1 million check on the sidewalk near the Federal Reserve Bank.

"I was just stumbling along, watching where I put my feet. I picked it up and didn't believe it was real," Johnson said Friday.

The check had fallen out of the pocket of office manager Isaac McQueen of the city treasurer's office, whose reaction was:

"When I found it was missing, my heart fell into my socks."

Johnson was with fellow Mountain Fuel Supply Co. employe Richard Bliss when he found the check McQueen lost en route to the bank.

Mearl Gene Smith, 25, of West Plains and Wayman E. Smith, 33, of Alton, were killed when the crew-cab pickup truck in which they were riding went out of control, slid 300 feet and overturned in the middle of Highway 142, six miles west of Doniphan at 6:50 p.m. Friday. Both men were dead on arrival at the Ripley County Hospital. The driver, Donald Ray Scott, 27 of Alton, received serious injuries along with another passenger Ben Allen Campbell, 28, of Alton. The accident occurred when a westbound car driven by Dexter Allen Edwards, 19, of Poplar Bluff came around a curve on the wrong side of the road and struck the eastbound car driven by Linda Sue Demaris.

The sisters were taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

An accident at 2:40 a.m. Saturday on the West outer road of Interstate 55, three miles south of Portageville resulted in serious injuries to two passengers, Debbie Edgin, 17, of Portageville and JoAnn Davis, 19, of Lebanon, Tenn.

The accident occurred when the southbound car driven by Bennie Chappell, 21, of Lebanon, Tenn. was being pursued by the Portageville Police at a high rate of speed and Chappell, lost control causing the car to overturn several times. High wind damages buildings

BLOOMFIELD — Strong winds about 5:15 p.m. Friday caused damage to a home and a garage the Stoddard County Sheriff's Department reported Saturday.

The winds blew off the roof of the Robert Shipman home southeast of Bloomfield while Mrs. Shipman and two of her sons were home. No one was reported injured, according to the department.

At the Love Henderson residence on Dexter Star Route, the winds took a 10 foot by 20 foot section of a garage and dropped it in a nearby pond.

Other damage was reported, but details were not available.

Robbers hit E-Z Mart

An employe of Barkett's E-Z Mart, 901 Davis Blvd., was robbed of a coin purse containing $107 and a set of keys Friday night by three men in their late teens or early 20's thought to be armed with a sawed-off shotgun.

Lt. Jack Patterson of the Sikeston Police Dept. said the employe, Mrs. Delores Cook, and another employe, Laura Noyes, were forced into a cooler by the three masked men, who entered the store at 8:43 p.m.

Lt. Patterson said that although a child reported seeing a vehicle leave the scene of the robbery, no description of it was available.

Nothing else was reported taken.

Three citizens band radios and a rifle were stolen from cars parked in the parking lot of the Kingsway Mall Friday and Saturday.

Roy E. Blue of Edwardsville, Ill. reported that a 23-channel citizens band radio was stolen from his car Friday evening. The radio was valued at $230.

Police believe entry to the car was gained through leather stripping on the driver's door.

Eloise Shell, 823 Pine St., told police her 23-channel citizens band radio was stolen Friday from her car. Police said a hanger was apparently used to enter the car. The value of the radio was $150.

A $200 citizens band radio owned by Kenneth Bush of New Madrid and his $50 rifle were taken from his pick-up early Saturday afternoon. The right vent window of the truck had been forced open.

Pair transferred to St. Louis

BENTON — Two of three men arrested last week on charges of dealing in explosives without a license and conspiracy to commit arson have been transferred to St. Louis by U.S. marshals for arraignment.

Orley Jackson and Thurmond H. "Sonny" Hazel were taken bythe marshals from the Scott County jail to St. Louis. Jackson's 19 year-old son, Ricky, has posted $35,000 bail.

The Jackson's operate the Rusty Rocks Restaurant in Illmo. They allegedly conspired with Hazel to burn the River Road Smorgasbord and Pearl's Cafe in Illmo.

At the time of their arrest investigators confiscated 32 electric blasting caps, 67 sticks of dynamite and an assortment of rifles and shotguns.

In addition, the Jacksons are charged with the Aug. 19 burglary of Southeast Missouri Stone Co. in Cape Girardeau. Assault and grand larceny charges are pending in Scott County on another charge.

Transfer of the two men to St. Louis was for the purpose of arraignment on federal charges of transferring explosive material when they knew or had reasonable knowledge that they were stolen and dealing in explosives without a license.

The arrest of all three men came after investigation by Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents, the Scott County sheriff's office and the Cape County prosecuting attorney's office.

Total bond for Jackson was set at $155,000 while that for Hazel was $55,000. A preliminary hearing has been set for these two on Aug. 30 on the state charges.

Market is broken into at Illmo

ILLMO — A small amount of change and a variety of meats were reported stolen during a Tuesday night break-in at Humphrey's Grocery Store, according to a spokesman for the Scott County Sheriff's Department, which is investigating.

The break-in was discovered Wednesday morning by the store owners, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Humphrey, as they arrived at the market.

Amnesia victim seeking identity

MILWAUKEE (AP) — She believes her maiden name was Kay Johnson, and that she arrived here from Alaska after stops in several other cities. She thinks she has a husband and four children.

But none of her leads have panned out, no one has claimed her as their own, and authorities seeking more clues to her identity say they have reached a dead end. Even truth serum hasn't helped.

"Living an existence as a nonperson is a terribly trying experience," Miss Johnson said last week after another visit to the Milwaukee Police Department for a fingerprint check.

"I guess going through all these procedures is designed to help me, but it also constantly r.minds me that I don't know who I am," she said. "It's very hard on a person to live like this. It's a heartbreaking and lonely existence."

"This is a severe case of amnesia and so far we have nothing to help us help her," Edward Andrzejewski, a county caseworker assigned to the woman, said. "The situation looks bleak, but we are doing all we can for her. We need help from somewhere."

Miss Johnson, poised, soft-spoken and articulate, appears to be about 40. She is 5 foot 5 and 126 pounds, has medium-length auburn hair and hazel eyes.

She says her life before May 25, the day she was brought to Milwaukee County authorities from a downtown bus depot, is a virtual blank.

Authorities have pursued the leads she has provided, but without success. The county, meanwhile, provides her with living quarters in the county institutions complex.

Andrzejewski said the woman apparently passed out at the bus station and was found by police. She told authorities she had been on a bus, but they could not determine which one she was riding.

"I think I have a family somewhere," she says. "I believe my husband is an aviator in some branch of military service. I remember having four children, all of whom I missed dearly."

Andrzejewski has contacted the Alaskan missing persons bureau and law enforcement authorities in Alaska, and copies of the woman's fingerprints have been sent to police departments in several cities.

But the contacts produced no new information.

"Our greatest hope in finding a positive lead fizzled," Andrzejewski said. "Kay was administered truth serum. We were initially pleased with the answers we got, but unfortunately none of the leads panned out. We got a lot of information, most of it disorganized."

Miss Johnson said she gets lonely and depressed, but most of all frustrated.

"Frustrated at not knowing what my family is doing without me, who I am and when this dreadful experience will end," she said. "I can only hope my nightmare will end soon."

CBers disrupt ransom payoff

LONG BEACH, Calif. AP--Persons attracted by citizens band radio reports may have disrupted a ransom drop in the kidnap-murder of a supermarket manager's wife, police say.

The body of Joann Seigman, 43, was found Friday in a ditch about 10 miles from her home in Rossmoor. She had been shot several times in the back of the head, a coroner's report said.

Mrs. Seigman and her three children were kidnaped at the family's house Wednesday by two gunmen wearing Halloween masks.

The children-Cathy, 19; John 16, and Paul, 11-were found Wednesday night, bound and gagged but unharmed, in the family van taken by the kidnapers.

John Seigman, 50, was at the home when the gunmen broke into the house. When they left with his wife and children, the kidnapers ordered him to drive to the Long Beach supermarket he manages and to collect whatever money was in the safe.

He was to wait for further instructions at a public telephone across the street from the supermarket. Carrying $8,000 from the safe, he waited.

Sheriff's deputies on surveillance near the market said persons with CB radios flooded into the area. The call from the kidnapers never came.

Sheriff's Lt. Sim Middleton said the CBers may have frightened the kidnapers away from the area.

"I'm not trying to give the impression I'm down on CB radios, but it appeared to the officers at the scene that a lot of people who showed up had CB rigs," said Middleton. He added, "A lot o f people including criminals use these things to listen in on police frequencies."

"I don't know what happened in ths particular case," said Jim Ferguson, a private CB owner who was asked about the police view. "But there were a couple of times when CBers helped the police."

Market is broken into at Illmo

ILLMO — A small amount of change and a variety of meats were reported stolen during a Tuesday night break-in at Humphrey's Grocery Store, according to a spokesman for the Scott County Sheriff's Department, which is investigating.

The break-in was discovered Wednesday morning by the store owners, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Humphrey, as they arrived at the market.

Amnesia victim seeking identity

MILWAUKEE (AP) — She believes her maiden name was Kay Johnson, and that she arrived here from Alaska after stops in several other cities. She thinks she has a husband and four children.

But none of her leads have panned out, no one has claimed her as their own, and authorities seeking more clues to her identity say they have reached a dead end. Even truth serum hasn't helped.

"Living an existence as a nonperson is a terribly trying experience," Miss Johnson said last week after another visit to the Milwaukee Police Department for a fingerprint check.

"I guess going through all these procedures is designed to help me, but it also constantly r.minds me that I don't know who I am," she said. "It's very hard on a person to live like this. It's a heartbreaking and lonely existence."

"This is a severe case of amnesia and so far we have nothing to help us help her," Edward Andrzejewski, a county caseworker assigned to the woman, said. "The situation looks bleak, but we are doing all we can for her. We need help from somewhere."

Miss Johnson, poised, softspoken and articulate, appears to be about 40. She is 5 foot 5 and 126 pounds, has medium-length auburn hair and hazel eyes.

She says her life before May 25, the day she was brought to Milwaukee County authorities from a downtown bus depot, is a virtual blank.

Authorities have pursued the leads she has provided, but without success. The county, meanwhile, provides her with living quarters in the county institutions complex.

Andrzejewski said the woman apparently passed out at the bus station and was found by police. She told authorities she had been on a bus, but they could not determine which one she was riding.

"I think I have a family somewhere," she says. "I beieve my husband is an aviator in some branch of military service. I remember having four children, all of whom I missed dearly."

Andrzejewski has contacted the Alaskan missing persons bureau and law enforcement authorities in Alaska, and copies of the woman's fingerprints have been sent to police departments in several cities.

But the contacts produced no new information.

"Our greatest hope in finding a positive lead fizzled," Andrzejewski said. "Kay was administered truth serum. We were initially pleased with the answers we got, but unfortunately none of the leads panned out. We got a lot of information, most of it disorganized."

Miss Johnson said she gets lonely and depressed, but most of all frustrated.

"Frustrated at not knowing what my family is doing without me, who I am and when this dreadful experience will end," she said. "I can only hope my nightmare will end soon."

CBers disrupt ransom payoff

LONG BEACH, Calif. AP--Persons attracted by citizens band radio reports may have disrupted a ransom drop in the kidnap-murder of a supermarket manager's wife, police say.

The body of Joann Seigman, 43, was found Friday in a ditch about 10 miles from her home in Rossmoor. She had been shot several times in the back of the head, a coroner's report said.

Mrs. Seigman and her three children were kidnaped at the family's house Wednesday by two gunmen wearing Halloween masks.

The children-Cathy, 19; John 16, and Paul, 11-were found Wednesday night, bound and gagged but unharmed, in the family van taken by the kidnapers.

John Seigman, 50, was at the home when the gunmen broke into the house. When they left with his wife and children, the kidnapers ordered him to drive to the Long Beach supermarket he manages and to collect whatever money was in the safe.

He was to wait for further instructions at a public telephone across the street from the supermarket. Carrying $8,000 from the safe, he waited.

Sheriff's deputies on surveillance near the market said persons with CB radios flooded into the area. The call from the kidnapers never came.

Sheriff's Lt. Sim Middleton said the CBers may have frightened the kidnapers away from the area.

"I'm not trying to give the impression I'm down on CB radios, but it appeared to the officers at the scene that a lot of people who showed up had CB rigs," said Middleton. He added, "A lot o f people including criminals use these things to listen in on police frequencies."

"I don't know what happened in ths particular case," said Jim Ferguson, a private CB owner who was asked about the police view. "But there were a couple of times when CBers helped the police."

Sikeston Aces shine in post-season tourneys

Look out area towns! If the successful campaigns waged by the undefeated nine and ten year old Aces and the 11 and 12 year old Aces are any indication, the baseball program of Sikeston is definitely headed in the right way.

"Most of those boys were disappointed when they didn't make the All-Stars," said nine and ten year old coach Kevin Kerr. The team simply set out to prove that they were better than the Little League coaches thought and they accomplished their objective by winning three tournaments, never losing in ten outings and beating the favored All-Stars by 14-3 and 5-0 scores.

Standout on the team was pitcher-firstbaseman Chris Stewart who won all ten games in addition to batting over .750, not bad in any league and outstanding against the All-League opponents that he faced.Stewart was voted the Most Valuable Player in the Scott City and Sikeston tournament and was runnerup at Charleston. Other Aces hitting over .500 were Brooks Sherman, Robert Merrell, Dennis Bean and Mike Cook.

The nine and ten year old Aces outscored their ten opponents 109-29, with five of the games stopped at four innings by the ten run rule.

"These guys were atop notch bunch," noted Kerr.

Aces manager Bill Pennington thanked the parents of his hard-working crew for their help during the post-season activities. "They went out of their way to make sure the boys got to the practices and to the games."

The 11 and 12 year old Aces enjoyed nearly as much success as their younger counterparts. They finished third at Scott City, second in Sikeston and won the Charleston tourney for the second year in a row.

Mike Hurley picked up the M.V.P. award at Charleston, winning two games and saving two more. Hurley hit over .800 for the Aces.

While winning the Charleston tournament, the Aces beat East Prairie, Bloomfield, New Madrid and, in the finals, Bernie. The game with Bernie was decided in four innings, 12-2 by the ten run rule.

Japan claims Little League World Series

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — "Today was my longest day," said Tokyo Manager Hidetoshi Suzuki. "But this is my happiest moment."

His Japanese team had just capitalized on numerous Campbell, Calif., mistakes and had shaken off some uncharacteristic blunders of its own to score a 10-3 victory Saturday and win the Little League World Series.

Taking advantage of six wild pitches by loser Rich Alvarez and cashing in on five errors, Japan clinched that country's first title since it won consecutive championships in 1967-68.

Their win in this 30th championship game for 11 and 12-year-olds returned the title to the Far East after foreign teams were banned here a year ago. Japan and five-time winner Taiwan had combined to win seven of eight crowns before 1975.

Playing before a crowd of 30,000 and a national televison audience, the Japanese jumped on top early before Campbell gamely battled back.

"I told them to play not to lose. I told them don't give anything away," Suzuki said.

The Japanese didn't. They relentlessly pulled away.

"The errors burned us," Campbell Manager Jack Zogg said. "But you have to give the Japanese credit. They took advantage of every one."

The U.S. West champions, who got the first hits and the first runs given up by the Japanese, used a two-run double by Ed Rodriquez and some control problems by Kiyoshi Tsumura to chip away at a five-run deficit.

Tsumura, perfect in his last outing, struck out nine batters and gave up just three hits. But he walked four and threw two wild pitches.

Campbell's woes began in the second inning with four wild pitches, a passed ball and three errors. Tokyo also had two hits in the inning for five runs and a 5-0 lead.

Broncos stop Big Red 21-17

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Otis Armstrong dashed 81 and two yards for touchdowns in the final half and lifted the Denver Broncos from behind to a 21-17 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals in a preseason National Football League game Saturday night.

Armstrong's runs, highlighting a strong Denver running attack, wiped out a 17-7 St. Louis lead established late in the third period with the aid Jim Hart's passes.

Armstrong, a former NFL rushing leader sidelined most of 1975 by injuries, broke lose for his 81-yard scoring gallup after Terry Metcalf's six-yard run handed St. Louis its biggest lead.

Five minutes afterward, following linebacker Richard Baska's interception of a Sam Wyche pass, Armstrong rammed intohthe end zone being strong blocking for the winning six points.

Ahead of the Armstrong runs, the Broncos scored on Keyworth's 11-yard ramble in the second quarter. Earlier, St. Louis had taken a 10-0 lead near the outset on Jackie Smith's reception of a nine-yard Hart pass and Jim Bakken's 25-yard field goal.

St. Louis, although outyarded 140-87 in the first two periods had expended a 10-7 lead at intermission to 17-7 with an 83-yard march engineered by Hart before Armstrong exploded.

On the Cardinal's next possession Hart found Metcalf for 16 yards to the Bronco's 14 and four plays later Bakken kicked his field goal.

Hart, who completed 11 of 16 passes for89 yards, gave way to Wyche following the second St. Louis touchdown.

Toronto wins NASL title

SEATTLE (AP) — Eusebio boomed home a direct free kick in the first half and his Toronto teammates added two more goals in the second half to take a 3-0 victory over the Minnesota Kicks Saturday in Soccer Bowl '76, the North American Soccer League championship.

The Metros, playing before a record championship game crowd of 25,765 in the Kingdome and a national television audience, became the 10th different NASL champion in as many years.

Eusebio, at 34, the old man on the Toronto team which battled through three playoff games in seven days to reach the title game, scored his free kick at 40:28. He was a doubtful starter only two days ago after suffering an injury to his right foot in the Metro's 2-0 Atlantic Conference title game against defending league champion Tampa Bay Tuesday night.

Minnesota, the Pacific Conference champion, entered the game a slight favorite because of its youth, speed and explosive offense.

The Kicks scored 54 goals in 24 regular season games and had won 10 of their last 11 games entering the championship contest.

3rd round postponed at Akron

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Masters champion Ray Floyd birdied the 12th hole and moved into a share of the lead Saturday just before play was halted in the storm-delayed and uncompleted third round of the $200,000 American Golf Classic.

Floyd, Australian David Graham and Jerry McGee, all tied for the lead and all among the 26 players stranded on the course, marked their positions and will return at 8:30 a.m. Sunday to complete their rounds.

A series ot violent thunderstorms forced a 2 hour, 55 minute delay early in the afternoon and rolling thunder that signaled the approach of still another one finally called a halt to the day's play at 6:01 p.m. EDT.

Officials held up play at that point and 29 minutes later finally called it off for the day.

All rounds that were completed will stand. After the completion of the third round, Sunday's regularly scheduled final round will be played beginning at 12 noon with the leaders going off the first tee at the wet and soggy North course of the Firestone Country Club at about 1:30 p.m.

McGee, Graham and Floyd all were nine under for the tournament. Graham had completed 11 holes of the third round and was one under for the day. Floyd threw approaches within six feet on two of the last three holes he played, birdied both and was two under par through 12 holes. McGee was five under after 14 holes.

Just one shot out—and all stranded on the course—were Ed Sneed, Jim Simons and Bob E. Smith. They were at eight under, Smith through 15 holes, Sneed and Simons through 12.

Former U.S. Open champion Lou Graham had the best round of the tournament, a seven-under-par 65 and completed 54 holes at 210, six under par. He was tied with Tom Watson, winner of the World Series of Golf last year, who finished a 68.

Arnold Palmer shot a 73 for a 218. PGA champion Dave Stockton also finished three rounds at 218 after a 71. Hale Irwin shot a 68 despite some difficulties after the first storm delay and was at 212.

Tom Weiskopf was the last man to finish. He played the last hole after the siren had sounded, warning the players from the course and shot 71 for 213.

Littell & K.C. bullpen corps hold off Boston

BOSTON (AP) — Shortstop Fred Patek drove in two runs and Kansas City relievers stopped Boston Saturday as the Royals downed the Red Sox 8-3.

Buck Martinez hit a home run, Jim Wohlford collected three hits, while Patek, Amos Otis and Cookie Rojas each had two hits for the American League West Division-leading Royals.

Otis had a pair of doubles, Patek and Rojas one each and Wohlford slammed a triple.

Al Fitzmorris, 15-9, got the victory, but left in the sixth inning. The Royals used four relief pitchers, who allowed a total of three hits and one run. Bill Lee, 2-5, was knocked out in the fourth inning.

Lee stalked off the mound angrily in the fourth inning when he was lifted and paced up and down the dugout, shouting, before heading for the locker room. Lee, Manager Don Zimmer and Rico Petrocelli, who approached Lee before the left-hander went into the clubhouse, all denied there was any trouble.

Lee, who said several Kansas City hits just narrowly missed being outs, said, "You can only take so much of that stuff before you get mad. Hitters can get rid of frustration by swinging harder—pitchers can't do that."

Lynn's homer, scoring Denny Doyle, who had doubled in the first inning, gave Boston a 2-0 lead. Kansas City tied the score in the third when Wohlford tripled over Rick Miller's head in right field, scoring Martinez who had singled, and scored himself on a sacrifice fly by Cowens.

The Royals scored twice in the fourth when John Mayberry and Rojas hitconsecutive singles and Patek lined a shot to right, driving in two and bringing in reliever Tom Murphy.

Yastrzemski cut the margin in the sixth when he singled home Lynn. However, Kansas City got a run back the next inning when Patek led off with a double, reached third on a bunt and subsequent throwing error by Murphy, and was singled home by Otis.

Kansas City wrapped it up in a three-run ninth on Martinez' homer to left and a double by Otis, two singles and an error by shortstop Rick Burleson.

Miller left the game in the third inning when he collided with Lynn in right-center while catching Cowens' sacrifice fly. Zimmer said later Miller that had the wind knocked out of him, and bruised his right knee, but was not seriously injured.

Dierker throws & hits Astros past Cardinals

HOUSTON (AP) — Larry Dierker fired a five-hitter and blasted a fourth-inning home run Saturday, helping the Houston Astros beat the St. Louis Cardinals 4-3.

Dierker, 13-12, survived a two-run St. Louis first-inning in posting his seventh complete game of the season. Cardinals starter Bob Forsch, 5-10, allowed all four Houston runs.

St. Louis scored two runs in the first on a walk to Jerry Mumphrey, Garry Templeton's RBI double and Lou Brock's grounder.

The Astros cut the Cardinals' lead to 2-1 on a first-inning walk to Greg Gross and singles by Bob Watson and Jose Cruz.

Singles by Cesar Cedeno, Watson and Ed Herrmann plus Don Kessinger's error accounted for two Astros runs in the third, with Dierker's first homer of the season producing the other run.

A walk, a fielder's choice and singles by Mumphrey and Templeton brought home the final Cardinals run in the fifth.

The triumph was Dierker's fourth straight over the Cardinals this season without a loss, while Forsch's 1976 record against Houston dropped to 0-4.

Dierker pitched his way out of a jam in the seventh. Kessinger led off with a triple but Cruz grounded to third baseman Enos Cabell, who fielded the ball and tagged Kessinger before throwing to first and completing a double play.

Ted Simmons doubled to lead off the St. Louis fourth but was erased trying to advance on Willie Crawford's fly ball.

The victory was Houston's fourth in its last five games and the Astros' eighth in 11 contests against St. Louis. The loss dropped the Cards into fifth place in the National League East.

O.J. says chances of trade to Rams slimming

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) O.J. Simpson said Saturday that if the Los Angeles Rams and Buffalo Bills don't agree on his possible trade this weekend "they probably won't get together at all."

The record-setting running back of the Bills played tennis in the Robert F. Kennedy Celebrity Tournament at Forest Hills while the Bills and the Rams prepared for a National Football League exhibition game on the West Coast.

Simpson was asked why, with so much at stake, he was not in Los Angeles to await the consequences.

"I wanted to get as far away as possible," he replied.

"I have been criticized for some remarks I have made in interviews already, so I am just going to get them work it out themselves," Simpson continued. "I will have comments to make afterwards, no matter what the result is."

Simpson, 29, an All-American and Heisman Trophy winner at the University of Southern California, has said he no longer wants to play in Buffalo and will quit the game unless he is traded to the Rams.

"With Ralph Wilson (Buffalo's owner) and Carroll Rosenbloom (Los Angeles' owner) getting together this weekend, it looks like it will be the only chance for a deal to be worked out," Simpson said.

Simpson played doubles with NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle against a basketball lineup of Julius Erving of the New York Nets and former ABA Commissioner Dave DeBusschere.

"I have talked with both Wilson and Rosenbloom but I have tried to remain out of it," Rozelle said. "I hope they can work something out. It would be a shame for a great back like Simpson to be out of football."

Wilson is balking on a deal on the grounds that the Rams have not offered proper compensation. He is seeking Jack Youngblood, the Rams' all-pro defensive end, but Los Angeles refuses to give him up.

Simpson has said that the Rams would be willing to give up players that would make the Bills a title contender. The Rams reportedly have offered running back Lawrence McCutcheon and other players but are holding firm on yielding Youngblood.

Celebrities from the worlds of politics, show business and sports frolicked on the West Side Tennis Club courts, where the U.S. Open starts next week, for charity in the tourney held in memory ofthe late Robert F. Kennedy.

Among those present were Sens. Edward F. Kennedy, D-Mass.; Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., and Jacob Javits, R-N.Y.; and show business personalities Gabriel Kaplan, Allan King, Buddy Hackett, and Cliff Roberston and his actress wife, Dina Merrill.

The Sikeston 11-12 year-old Aces took third place in the Scott City Invitational Tournament, placed second in the Sikeston tournament and finished first at Charleston. Sikeston Aces shine in post-season tourneys

Look out area towns! If the successful campaigns waged by the undefeated nine and ten year old Aces and the 11 and 12 year old Aces are any indication, the baseball program of Sikeston is definitely headed in the right way.

"Most of those boys were disappointed when they didn't make the All-Stars," said nine and ten year old coach Kevin Kerr. The team simply set out to prove that they were better than the Little League coaches thought and they accomplished their objective by winning three tournaments, never losing in ten outings and beating the favored All-Stars by 14-3 and 5-0 scores.

Standout on the team was pitcher-firstbaseman Chris Stewart who won all ten games in addition to batting over .750, not bad in any league and outstanding against the All-League opponents that he faced.Stewart was voted the Most Valuable Player in the Scott City and Sikeston tournament and was runnerup at Charleston. Other Aces hitting over .500 were Brooks Sherman, Robert Merrell, Dennis Bean and Mike Cook.

The nine and ten year old Aces outscored their ten opponents 109-29, with five of the games stopped at four innings by the ten run rule.

"These guys were atop notch bunch," noted Kerr.

Aces manager Bill Pennington thanked the parents of his hard-working crew for their help during the post-season activities. "They went out of their way to make sure the boys got to the practices and to the games."

The 11 and 12 year old Aces enjoyed nearly as much success as their younger counterparts. They finished third at Scott City, second in Sikeston and won the Charleston tourney for the second year in a row.

Mike Hurley picked up the M.V.P. award at Charleston, winning two games and saving two more. Hurley hit over .800 for the Aces.

While winning the Charleston tournament, the Aces beat East Prairie, Bloomfield, New Madrid and, in the finals, Bernie. The game with Bernie was decided in four innings, 12-2 by the ten run rule.

Japan claims Little League World Series

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — "Today was my longest day," said Tokyo Manager Hidetoshi Suzuki. "But this is my happiest moment."

His Japanese team had just capitalized on numerous Campbell, Calif., mistakes and had shaken off some uncharacteristic blunders of its own to score a 10-3 victory Saturday and win the Little League World Series.

Taking advantage of six wild pitches by loser Rich Alvarez and cashing in on five errors, Japan clinched that country's first title since it won consecutive championships in 1967-68.

Their win in this 30th championship game for 11 and 12-year-olds returned the title to the Far East after foreign teams were banned here a year ago. Japan and five-time winner Taiwan had combined to win seven of eight crowns before 1975.

Playing before a crowd of 30,000 and a national televison audience, the Japanese jumped on top early before Campbell gamely battled back.

"I told them to play not to lose. I told them don't give anything away," Suzuki said.

The Japanese didn't. They relentlessly pulled away.

"The errors burned us," Campbell Manager Jack Zogg said. "But you have to give the Japanese credit. They took advantage of every one."

The U.S. West champions, who got the first hits and the first runs given up by the Japanese, used a two-run double by Ed Rodriquez and some control problems by Kiyoshi Tsumura to chip away at a five-run deficit.

Tsumura, perfect in his last outing, struck out nine batters and gave up just three hits. But he walked four and threw two wild pitches.

Campbell's woes began in the second inning with four wild pitches, a passed ball and three errors. Tokyo also had two hits in the inning for five runs and a 5-0 lead.

Broncos stop Big Red 21-17

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Otis Armstrong dashed 81 and two yards for touchdowns in the final half and lifted the Denver Broncos from behind to a 21-17 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals in a preseason National Football League game Saturday night.

Armstrong's runs, highlighting a strong Denver running attack, wiped out a 17-7 St. Louis lead established late in the third period with the aid Jim Hart's passes.

Armstrong, a former NFL rushing leader sidelined most of 1975 by injuries, broke lose for his 81-yard scoring gallup after Terry Metcalf's six-yard run handed St. Louis its biggest lead.

Five minutes afterward, following linebacker Richard Baska's interception of a Sam Wyche pass, Armstrong rammed intohthe end zone being strong blocking for the winning six points.

Ahead of the Armstrong runs, the Broncos scored on Keyworth's 11-yard ramble in the second quarter. Earlier, St. Louis had taken a 10-0 lead near the outset on Jackie Smith's reception of a nine-yard Hart pass and Jim Bakken's 25-yard field goal.

St. Louis, although outyarded 140-87 in the first two periods had expended a 10-7 lead at intermission to 17-7 with an 83-yard march engineered by Hart before Armstrong exploded.

On the Cardinal's next possession Hart found Metcalf for 16 yards to the Bronco's 14 and four plays later Bakken kicked his field goal.

Hart, who completed 11 of 16 passes for89 yards, gave way to Wyche following the second St. Louis touchdown.

Toronto wins NASL title

SEATTLE (AP) — Eusebio boomed home a direct free kick in the first half and his Toronto teammates added two more goals in the second half to take a 3-0 victory over the Minnesota Kicks Saturday in Soccer Bowl '76, the North American Soccer League championship.

The Metros, playing before a record championship game crowd of 25,765 in the Kingdome and a national television audience, became the 10th different NASL champion in as many years.

Eusebio, at 34, the old man on the Toronto team which battled through three playoff games in seven days to reach the title game, scored his free kick at 40:28. He was a doubtful starter only two days ago after suffering an injury to his right foot in the Metro's 2-0 Atlantic Conference title game against defending league champion Tampa Bay Tuesday night.

Minnesota, the Pacific Conference champion, entered the game a slight favorite because of its youth, speed and explosive offense.

The Kicks scored 54 goals in 24 regular season games and had won 10 of their last 11 games entering the championship contest.

Littell & K.C. bullpen corps hold off Boston

BOSTON (AP) — Shortstop Fred Patek drove in two runs and Kansas City relievers stopped Boston Saturday as the Royals downed the Red Sox 8-3.

Buck Martinez hit a home run, Jim Wohlford collected three hits, while Patek, Amos Otis and Cookie Rojas each had two hits for the American League West Division-leading Royals.

Otis had a pair of doubles, Patek and Rojas one each and Wohlford slammed a triple.

Al Fitzmorris, 15-9, got the victory, but left in the sixth inning. The Royals used four relief pitchers, who allowed a total of three hits and one run. Bill Lee, 2-5, was knocked out in the fourth inning.

Lee stalked off the mound angrily in the fourth inning when he was lifted and paced up and down the dugout, shouting, before heading for the locker room. The Royals scored twice in the fourth when John Mayberry and Rojas hitconsecutive singles and Patek lined a shot to right, driving in two and bringing in reliever Tom Murphy.

Yastrzemski cut the margin in the sixth when he singled home Lynn. However, Kansas City got a run back the next inning when Patek led off with a double, reached third on a bunt and subsequent throwing error by Murphy, and was singled home by Otis.

Kansas City wrapped it up in a three-run ninth on Martinez' homer to left and a double by Otis, two singles and an error by shortstop Rick Burleson.

Miller left the game in the third inning when he collided with Lynn in right-center while catching Cowens' sacrifice fly. Zimmer said later Miller that had the wind knocked out of him, and bruised his right knee, but was not seriously injured.

Dierker throws & hits Astros past Cardinals

HOUSTON (AP) — Larry Dierker fired a five-hitter and blasted a fourth-inning home run Saturday, helping the Houston Astros beat the St. Louis Cardinals 4-3.

Dierker, 13-12, survived a two-run St. Louis first-inning in posting his seventh complete game of the season. Cardinals starter Bob Forsch, 5-10, allowed all four Houston runs.

St. Louis scored two runs in the first on a walk to Jerry Mumphrey, Garry Templeton's RBI double and Lou Brock's grounder.

The Astros cut the Cardinals' lead to 2-1 on a first-inning walk to Greg Gross and singles by Bob Watson and Jose Cruz.

Singles by Cesar Cedeno, Watson and Ed Herrmann plus Don Kessinger's error accounted for two Astros runs in the third, with Dierker's first homer of the season producing the other run.

A walk, a fielder's choice and singles by Mumphrey and Templeton brought home the final Cardinals run in the fifth.

The triumph was Dierker's fourth straight over the Cardinals this season without a loss, while Forsch's 1976 record against Houston dropped to 0-4.

Dierker pitched his way out of a jam in the seventh. Kessinger led off with a triple but Cruz grounded to third baseman Enos Cabell, who fielded the ball and tagged Kessinger before throwing to first and completing a double play.

Ted Simmons doubled to lead off the St. Louis fourth but was erased trying to advance on Willie Crawford's fly ball.

The victory was Houston's fourth in its last five games and the Astros' eighth in 11 contests against St. Louis. The loss dropped the Cards into fifth place in the National League East.

3rd round postponed at Akron

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Masters champion Ray Floyd birdied the 12th hole and moved into a share of the lead Saturday just before play was halted in the storm-delayed and uncompleted third round of the $200,000 American Golf Classic.

Floyd, Australian David Graham and Jerry McGee, all tied for the lead and all among the 26 players stranded on the course, marked their positions and will return at 8:30 a.m. Sunday to complete their rounds.

A series of violent thunderstorms forced a 2 hour, 55 minute delay early in the afternoon and rolling thunder that signaled the approach of still another one finally called a halt to the day's play at 6:01 p.m. EDT.

Officials held up play at that point and 29 minutes later finally called it off for the day.

All rounds that were completed will stand. After the completion of the third round, Sunday's regularly scheduled final round will be played beginning at 12 noon with the leaders going off the first tee at the wet and soggy North course of the Firestone Country Club at about 1:30 p.m.

McGee, Graham and Floyd all were nine under for the tournament. Graham had completed 11 holes of the third round and was one under for the day. Floyd threw approaches within six feet on two of the last three holes he played, birdied both and was two under par through 12 holes. McGee was five under after 14 holes.

Just one shot out—and all stranded on the course—were Ed Sneed, Jim Simons and Bob E. Smith. They were at eight under, Smith through 15 holes, Sneed and Simons through 12.

Former U.S. Open champion Lou Graham had the best round of the tournament, a seven-under-par 65 and completed 54 holes at 210, six under par. He was tied with Tom Watson, winner of the World Series of Golf last year, who finished a 68.

Arnold Palmer shot a 73 for a 218. PGA champion Dave Stockton also finished three rounds at 218 after a 71. Hale Irwin shot a 68 despite some difficulties after the first storm delay and was at 212.

Tom Weiskopf was the last man to finish. He played the last hole after the siren had sounded, warning the players from the course and shot 71 for 213.

Governor Bond pays tribute to sportsman

JEFFERSON CITY — Governor Christopher S. Bond has recognized Missouri's hunters and fishermen by proclaiming September 25 as Hunting and Fishing Day in Missouri, coinciding with National Hunting and Fishing Day.

Governor Bond's state proclamation joins many other gubernatorial tributes, as well as many from the mayors of cities and a statement of support from Gerald Ford, President of the United States.

"Some modern-day envrionmentalists are not aware of the past contributions that our outdoor sportsmen have made to this cause," President Ford's statement says. "And others may not fully comprehend that wildlife populations need to be managed scientifically like all other natural resources. Properly regulated by the states with Federal assistance, fishing and hunting are an integral part of wildlife management."

Since it began in 1972, National Hunting and Fishing Day has grown from four million participants to 20 million in 1975.

There are more than 55 million hunters and fishermen in the United States. In the past half century, they have contributed more than $5 billion to conservation and the annual total now is about $250 million in permit fees and taxes on outdoor sports equipment.

Honorary chairman of NHF Day this year is Johnny Miller, famed professional golfer and an ardent hunter and fisherman. He has been in the top 10 money winners on the professional tour every year since 1973, led in 1974 and was second in 1975.

In 1975, all 50 governors and more than 500 mayors issued tributes to the nation's sportsmen.

Governor Bond's proclamation reads:

"WHEREAS, recognition of our outdoor heritage is vitally important in this Bicentennial year and threats to the incomparable beauty of our outdoors continue to mount; and

"WHEREAS, the nation's sportsmen historically have borne the major share and responsibility for defending the integrity of the outdoors and maintaining its richness and sanctity; and

"WHEREAS, Missouri has a million hunters and fishermen who have contributed to conservation by buying hunting and fishing permits and through excise taxes on their purchase of outdoor sports equipment; and

"WHEREAS, sportsman support of efforts to restore huntable wildlife not only has brought several endangered and threatened species to healthy numbers once again, but has benefited all wildlife, for wildlife depends on good habitat; and

"WHEREAS, hunting and fishing provide healthy and historically traditional relaxations to quell the frustrations and aggravations of modern life:

"NOW THEREFORE, I CHRISTOPHER S. BOND, GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF MISSOURI, do hereby proclaim September 25, 1976, as HUNTING AND FISHING DAY IN MISSOURI."

Astros nip Birds 2-1 Friday night

HOUSTON — (AP) — Bo McLaughlin wanted to improve upon his last effort against St. Louis and he made no mistakes in proving his point.

The rookie righthander allowed no earned runs while checking St. Louis on five hits Friday night as the Houston Astros clipped the Cardinals 2-1.

McLaughlin, 2-2, who was tagged for four runs and six hits in the first inning of his last starting assignment against the Cards, went the distance this time for his second complete game of the season.

St. Louis starter Harry Rasmussen, 5-10, absorbed his eighth loss in his last 10 decisions.

Fourth inning singles by Enos Cabell and Cesar Cedeno preceded a two-run double by Bob Watson providing McLaughlin with the onlyruns he needed.

A sixth inning single by Garry Templeton, a passed ball and Lou Brock's RBI base hit scored St. Louis' only run as the Astros took their third victory in their last four contests.

"It was nice to get this one," said McLaughlin. "I tried to go out and challenge the hitters. I had a little better stuff than the last time I faced the Cardinals. I had a real good breaking pitch."

Watson feels this victory will help both the Astros and McLaughlin.

"The team needed a real strong effort from Bo," Watson said. "It was a confidence builder for both him and the team.

"Hits like the one I had are the real sweet kind. They said those type of hits even out and if they do I have a lot more coming."

The victory was Houston's seventh in 10 outings against St. Louis this season as the loss dropped the Cards to within one-half game of last place Chicago in the National League East.

Corporate bond issues are leading shorter lives. Over 40 per cent of publicly-offered corporate bonds issued in 1974 and 1975 had maturities of less than 20 years. Behind the trend is increased concern about the uncertainties of inflation and the quality of the borrower, The Conference Board notes. While investors have been reluctant to commit long-term funds, borrowers worried about their continued availability have sought them out, despite record or near-record rates of interest.

"He asked if he could come and he brought my mother flowers," said a daughter of the couple that operates the Maxwell House Hotel, which has become Ali's headquarters as he trains for his heavyweight title defense against Ken Norton Sept. 28 in New York's Yankee Stadium.

Yankee Stadium is a perfect setting for a man of Ali's fame. But a one-traffic-light town of 3,378 people, 6,400 feet up in the White Mountains?

"You have to go through Show Low to get to anything else up here," said Jerry L. Hochevar, president of an auto agency on East Deuce of Clubs Avenue.

Tourists pass through Show Low on Route 60 en route to ski areas or on visits to the nearby Ft. Apache Reservation.

But what Ali was looking for was the privacy he has lost in his successful search for fame.

"No beggars, no hangers on. Nobody bothers me," are Ali's reasons for opening a training camp here. He has been joined by his companion, Veronica Porsche, and their infant daughter, Hana; by aides Angelo Dundee, Gene Kilroy, Bundini Brown and Walli Muhammad, and by Dick Gregory, friend, former comedian and health food enthusiast.

Not to be found here are the crowds that used to swarm his camp at Deer Lake, Pa., and which jammed airports in Kinshasa, Kuala Lumpur and Manila. Neither are freeloaders who forced him to flee his farm at Berrien Springs, Mich.

Of course he cannot escape completely. But the attention is modest, respectful and showered from a distance.

—Fifty to 100 people show up at his workouts; the heavy and speed bags are inside a worse-for-wear hangar at the Show Low airport and the ring is outside. The spectators snap pictures and watch quietly, laughing but not guffawing when the champion says something or pretends he has been knocked down.

"Float like a butterfly. Sting like a bee. Welcome to Show Low, Muhammad Ali."

"It's an honor to have him Ali here," said Elbert Lewis, who runs a furniture store and has lived in Show Low for 30 years.

"It would be nice if he had just passed through," said John Denbelein, who left a salesman job in New Jersey to come here six years ago and open the pizza parlor.

But Ali didn't pass through, even though his original destination was Springerville, a town he became familiar with three months ago. That's where he met Gregory, who was conducting a march to call attention to starvation in the world.

So the 34-year-old champ and two friends set out for Arizona and, while driving in the mountains at night, found what Ali was looking for.

"Didn't see no people, no traffic," said Ali ofShow Low, which legend says was named after a card game.

And now the town has become known through Ali.

But "it's too far from Yankee Stadium," said John Condon, the publicist who knows that for the fight to be a major success Ali must be near the major media market in the East.

AP Sports Writer

The Nebraska Cornhuskers are the preseason choice to dethrone defending champion Oklahoma and prevent the Sooners from winning an unprecedented third consecutive national college football title.

In a nationwide Associated Press poll of 59 sports writers and broadcasters, nine different teams earned at least one vote for the No. 1 spot. Nebraska, which finished ninth a year ago, received 25 first-place ballots and 961 of a possible 1,180 points.

Oklahoma, last year's No. 1 pick in both the preseason and final polls despite a drop to seventh during the campaign, was No. 5 this time behind Michigan, Arizona State and Ohio State. Rounding out the Top Ten are Alabama, Texas, Southern California, Pittsburgh and Penn State.

The Second Ten consists of Notre Dame, Maryland, Arkansas, Texas A&M, California, Georgia, UCLA, Florida, Kansas and Miami of Ohio.

Michigan, which lost to Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl, received 10 first-place votes and 918 points while Arizona State, runnerup to Oklahoma in 1975, had seven first-place ballots and 780 points. Then came Ohio State with three votes for No. 1 and 749 points and Oklahoma with six first-place votes but only 683 total points.

Alabama and Texas also received three first-place votes while Southern Cal had two and one went to Pitt.

"I guess I have mixed feelings about the No. 1 ranking," said Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne. "It's nice that people feel we're a good team and, hopefully, where there's that kind of confidence there might be some reason for optimism.

"But on the other hand, a No. 1 ranking leads to great expectations. I hope we're as good as people think we are."

Oklahoma's Barry Switzer wasn't surprised by the preseason ratings.

"I'd have been surprised if we had been No. 1," he said. "I look at it like it is. If we had the players returning that we lost, then we should be No. 1. I'd have picked Nebraska right there at the top, too."

The Second Ten consisted of Texas A&M, Miami of Ohio, Maryland, California, Pitt, Colorado, Southern Cal, Arizona, Georgia and West Virginia. West Virginia was the only member of last year's Top Twenty which didn't receive a single mention in the 1976 voting.

The regular-season polls will begin following the games of Sept. 11.

Long week for Richards ends

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — When it was over, when Renee Richards had lost to a vegetarian almost half her age, she still felt like a winner.

"The applause sure felt good," said the 42-year-old eye surgeon from Newport Beach, Calif., after Lea Antonoplis, 17, of Glendora, Calif., had beaten her 6-7, 6-3, 6-0 in a grueling two-hour and eight-minute match under hot and muggy conditions.

When it was over the sellout crowd of 3,600 stood to applaud Dr. Richards.

The week had not been an easy one. When Dr. Richards, who last year underwent a sex change operation, entered the Tennis Week Open 25 women players dropped out in protest.

The players questioned whether Dr. Richards should be allowed to play women's tennis.

Then there were the countless interviews and the constant worry about acceptance, both on and off the tennis court.

Numerous times during the week, Dr. Richards said she realized spectators and the media were watching her every move, waiting for a display of anger. On Saturday, she did let go. After losing a key point, she threw her racquet down in disgust.

"I felt I didn't have to be the model of perfection I was last Saturday," she said, referring to her first match here.

She said her friends on the West Coast had warned her about Eastern tennis crowds. "Wait until you get back East," the friends told her. "They told me, 'it's going to be a zoo back there.' I was surprised I was treated so well here. I felt good here," she said.

On Saturday, the medical question finally took a back seat to sports. It all came down to tennis—the stadium court at the decorous Orange Lawn Tennis Club.

"I was tired. I just got beat. I knew in the third set I didn't have a shot," Dr. Richards said, still perspiring profusely.

Admittedly out of shape, Dr. Richards said she would give serious thought to "doing some of the things Lea's doing, like running five to six miles a day" to get in better condition.

"I'm going to continue to play tennis," she said. "I am going to have to get into better condition than I am.

"You can't smoke a cigarette and stay up late if you want to play big league tennis," Dr. Richards said, as she puffed on her filtered cigarette.

She said she wasn't certain she would take the time and make the effort to get in tip-top shape.

"If I wanted to take a leave of absence from my practice for three or six months I could do it," she said. "Whether I have the physical or mental stamina for that, ask me next week when I'm not so tired."

In the eighth game of the first set she trailed love-40, but won five straight points to win the game to make it 4-4.

Hoople rates Michigan No. 1; picks Kansas , Miami to win

By Major Amos B. Hoople
Football Wizard

Egad, friends, almost as quickly as Woody Hayes can spell Nick Buonamici, the Buckeyes 6-3, 242-pound tackle, the 1976 college season will be here. Ohio State will take another week to ready its offensive and defensive forces, but elsewhere across the nation many top-rated clubs, including North Carolina State, Kansas, Mississippi, Miami University of Ohio and Mississippi State will swing into action this week.

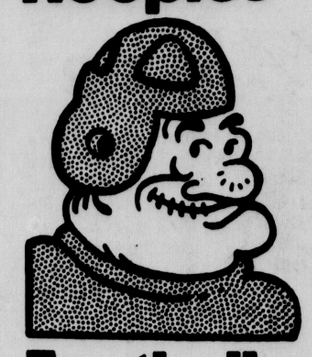
Before tackling this week's forecast, let me give you the — ahem — esteemed Hoople System's list of the nation's Top Ten based on my on-the-site inspection of the conference powers and independents, and the reports of the Hoople correspondents in the field.

1. Michigan
2. Alabama
3. Nebraska
4. Texas
5. Notre Dame
6. So. California
7. Arizona State
8. Ohio State
9. Florida
10. Penn State

Yas, dear readers, Michigan's offense, with super quarterback Rick Leach in charge, will go into high gear from their opener right through the Rose Bowl to win the No. 1 rating. Alabama, too, should go all the way to its sixth straight Southeastern crown, and Nebraska will supplant Oklahoma as the Big Eight power.

Darrell Royal has another of his great Texas clubs. And the Irish of Notre Dame with a wealth of returning talent should round-out the first five. The rest of the Top Ten are capable of moving up fast if any of the leaders let down.

Major Hoople's



Football Forecast

The Hoople "sleeper of the year" is Pittsburgh where Coach Johnny Majors has a ton of talent back including the sensational Tony Dorsett. If the Panthers should spring their second upset in a row over Notre Dame in their season opener next week look out!

Now for this week's card. We look for an excellent Miami University of Ohio, team to knock off North Carolina's Tar Heels, 35-28, on the latters home field. In another intersectional clash, Kansas will make its journey to Corvallis, Oregon, a successful one by downing host Oregon State, 24-8.

In the Mid-American loop opener Ohio University will thump Eastern Michigan, 34-14. In a very hotly contested fray, Mississippi State's Bulldogs will hang on to defeat North Texas State, 17-14!

Now go on with my forecast:

Governor Bond pays tribute to sportsman

JEFFERSON CITY — Governor Christopher S. Bond has recognized Missouri's hunters and fishermen by proclaiming September 25 as Hunting and Fishing Day in Missouri, coinciding with National Hunting and Fishing Day.

Governor Bond's state proclamation joins many other gubernatorial tributes, as well as many from the mayors of cities and a statement of support from Gerald Ford, President of the United States.

"Some modern-day envrionmentalists are not aware of the past contributions that our outdoor sportsmen have made to this cause," President Ford's statement says. "And others may not fully comprehend that wildlife populations need to be managed scientifically like all other natural resources. Properly regulated by the states with Federal assistance, fishing and hunting are an integral part of wildlife management."

Honorary chairman of NHF Day this year is Johnny Miller, famed professional golfer and an ardent hunter and fisherman. He has been in the top 10 money winners on the professional tour every year since 1973, led in 1974 and was second in 1975.

In 1975, all 50 governors and more than 500 mayors issued tributes to the nation's sportsmen.

Governor Bond's proclamation reads:

"WHEREAS, recognition of our outdoor heritage is vitally important in this Bicentennial year and threats to the incomparable beauty of our outdoors continue to mount; and

"WHEREAS, the nation's sportsmen historically have borne the major share and responsibility for defending the integrity of the outdoors and maintaining its richness and sanctity; and

On Saturday, the medical question finally took a back seat to sports. It all came down to tennis—the stadium court at the decorous Orange Lawn Tennis Club.

"I was tired. I just got beat. I knew in the third set I didn't have a shot," Dr. Richards said, still perspiring profusely.

Admittedly out of shape, Dr. Richards said she would give serious thought to "doing some of the things Lea's doing, like running five to six miles a day" to get in better condition.

"I'm going to continue to play tennis," she said. "I am going to have to get into better condition than I am.

"You can't smoke a cigarette and stay up late if you want to play big league tennis," Dr. Richards said, as she puffed on her filtered cigarette.

She said she wasn't certain she would take the time and make the effort to get in tip-top shape.

"If I wanted to take a leave of absence from my practice for three or six months I could do it," she said. "Whether I have the physical or mental stamina for that, ask me next week when I'm not so tired."

In the eighth game of the first set she trailed love-40, but won five straight points to win the game to make it 4-4.

Hoople rates Michigan No. 1; picks Kansas , Miami to win

By Major Amos B. Hoople
Football Wizard

Egad, friends, almost as quickly as Woody Hayes can spell Nick Buonamici, the Buckeyes 6-3, 242-pound tackle, the 1976 college season will be here. Ohio State will take another week to ready its offensive and defensive forces, but elsewhere across the nation many top-rated clubs, including North Carolina State, Kansas, Mississippi, Miami University of Ohio and Mississippi State will swing into action this week.

Before tackling this week's forecast, let me give you the — ahem — esteemed Hoople System's list of the nation's Top Ten based on my on-the-site inspection of the conference powers and independents, and the reports of the Hoople correspondents in the field.

1. Michigan
2. Alabama
3. Nebraska
4. Texas
5. Notre Dame
6. So. California
7. Arizona State
8. Ohio State
9. Florida
10. Penn State

Yas, dear readers, Michigan's offense, with super quarterback Rick Leach in charge, will go into high gear from their opener right through the Rose Bowl to win the No. 1 rating. Alabama, too, should go all the way to its sixth straight Southeastern crown, and Nebraska will supplant Oklahoma as the Big Eight power.

Darrell Royal has another of his great Texas clubs. And the Irish of Notre Dame with a wealth of returning talent should round-out the first five. The rest of the Top Ten are capable of moving up fast if any of the leaders let down.

Major Hoople's

Football Forecast

The Hoople "sleeper of the year" is Pittsburgh where Coach Johnny Majors has a ton of talent back including the sensational Tony Dorsett. If the Panthers should spring their second upset in a row over Notre Dame in their season opener next week look out!

Now for this week's card. We look for an excellent Miami University of Ohio, team to knock off North Carolina's Tar Heels, 35-28, on the latters home field. In another intersectional clash, Kansas will make its journey to Corvallis, Oregon, a successful one by downing host Oregon State, 24-8.

In the Mid-American loop opener Ohio University will thump Eastern Michigan, 34-14. In a very hotly contested fray, Mississippi State's Bulldogs will hang on to defeat North Texas State, 17-14!

Now go on with my forecast:

Indians fight inexperience

The SMSU football team is undergoing an extensive rebuilding effort at the hands of head coach Jim Lohr. The defending MIAA champion Indians lost 27 players to graduation, including 14 starters.

Finding replacements for these players has been Lohr's primary goal during pre-season practices, and he believes that overcoming the lack of experience on his team will be a decisive factor in the upcoming campaign.

"We've got inexperienced players taking the place of all-conference seniors," said Lohr.

The Indian defense, hardest hit by graduation, will be the key to victory this season, according to Lohr. "We have a good first-line secondary, but we need some back-up strength," he said, adding, "Our strength is in our quickness, not our size."

The linebacking corps is considerably more experienced with three returning veterans in juniors Dave Beile, Gary Brileyy and SteveCash. Cash is from Poplar Bluff.

Strong point of the defensive unit is in the secondary where senior Everett Falder, senior Bruce Germany, junior Kevin Hunt, senior Jim Limbaugh and junior Dan Weiser are all potential starters.

Success of the Indian offense will depend upon how well junior Don Backfish of Dexter is able to fill the shoes of the departed Rick Weiser at quarterback. Another q.b. candidate, Juco transfer Phil Miller, is out with a separated shoulder. He will miss the first two games.

The MIAA's top kicker of 1975, Mike Wood, seems to be the Indians' "biggest plus" according to Lehr.

Wood, who led the NCAA Division II with a 43.2 punting average, also holds the school field goal record of 61 yards. Lohr looks for a strong season from Wood and doesn't rule out the possibility of a 70-yard field goal from his senior booter.

Looking ahead to the season, the coach sees NEMSU-Kirksville, which finished second in the MIAAA last season, as the stiffest competition. The Bulldogs return practically their entire squad for the coming season.

Player Periscope

Fine performances by Mark Littell and Steve Coulson highlighted the play of Southeast Missouri's four professional baseball players this week, according to the latest statistics.

Littell earned his 14th and 15th saves of the season for the Kansas City Royals, who are nine games ahead of Oakland in the American League Western Division race. The Gideon athlete has a 7-3 record and a 1.82 earned run average as Kansas City's top relief pitcher.

Coulson, playing for the New York Yankees' AA team at West Haven, went 9-for-26 this week to raise his batting average to .278. The second baseman from Fisk has two homers and 39 RBI's this season.

Puxico's Galen McSpadden had a rough outing for the first time in weeks for San Diego's Amarillo team in the AA Texas League, but escaped without a decision. McSpadden's record is still 10-6, while his ERA went to a still-respectable 3.00.

Gary Blaylock of Malden went hitless this week for the Royals' Jacksonville team in the Southern League. Blaylock is batting a lowly .222 with five homers and 36 RBI's.

Injury may idle Evert

FORT LAUDERDALE , Fla-AP--Chris Evert said Saturday she may not be able to defend her U.S. Open tennis title next week at Forest Hills because of continuing problems with her right middle finger.

Miss Evert withdrew from this week's Federation Cup matches in Philadelphia because of inflamed tendons in the finger. The finger is in a splint and she hasn't played tennis in two weeks.

She said she would test the finger in practice Sunday and would have a doctor examine it Monday.

She couldn't grip the racket when she tried to practice a week ago and was treated for tendonitis last week.

Miss Evert, seeded first, said shoe would defend her title if she could play at 80 eper cent efficiency.

"Right now," she addeded, "I'm about 50 per cent."

The injury , the first major one she has had, left her deliberating whether to play World Team Tennis next year or skip WTC in order to get some rest from tennis, she said.

"I must decide by November 1 if I want to play WTC next year," she said. "I play too much tennis."

Her father, teaching pro Jimmy Evert of Fort Lauderdale, said, "As soon as Chrissie overcomes the initial fear of the pain returning, I think she will be able to play.

"If she can play, I hope she won't be too rusty," Evert added. "She's sanxious and wants to play. You know how it is:...Nobocdy likes to be injured or restricted. She's ready to go as soon as her finger is."

Blue misses no-hitter

OAKLAND (AP) — The Oakland A's Vida Blue came within two outs of pitching his second major league no-hitter Saturday, giving up a ninth-inning home run to Mickey Stanley and settling for his third one-hitter in a 5-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

The 27-year-old left-handed pitcher, 13-11, struck out five and walked one in his sixth straight complete game performance.

Errors by third baseman Sal Bando and shortstop Bert Campaneris in the eighth inning allowed Detroit to score its first run.

Joe Rudi drove in three Oakland runs, singling home one in the first inning and ripping a two-run double in the seventh. The A's left fielder raised his season's RBI total to 78.

Blue pitched a no-hitter as a rookie on Sept. 21, 1970 against the Minnesota Twins. He also was involved in another no-hitter on the final day of the 1975 season, going five innings in a game which relievers Glenn Abbott, Paul Lindblad and Rollie Fingers finished as the A's prepared for the post-season playoffs.

Detroit starter Dave Roberts, 12-13, was knocked out in the seventh when the A's scored three runs. He had pitched three complete game victories against Oakland earlier this year.

Sports dropped

There are five high schools in Rockford, Illinois, and today none of them have a sports program. Voters voted down a tax proposal last Thursday by a 2-to-1 majority that would have added 60 cents per hundred dollars' assessed valuation to individual taxes.

Booster clubs from the schools offered to raise $300,000 to reinstate all extra curricular activities, but the board rejected the offer, saying the cuts had been well defined for the voters before the election.

More than 200 students, many of them crying, gathered outside the school board offices as the decision was announced. No such cuts have been taken in Missouri schools, although such discussion has centered around the St. Louis metropolitan schools.

U.S. Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy, during a tumultuous welcome by West Germans on February 22, 1962, said the United States would back them up with "the full strength of American power."

The young

are vital to the present and the hope of the future for American farming. Above left, Heidi Evans, 6, of Jamestown, Ohio, with her prize-winning sheep at the 1975 State Fair; right, Jean Schnelle, of Lockwood, Mo., pulls weeds from a planter while expertly balancing six-month-old son Dwight.

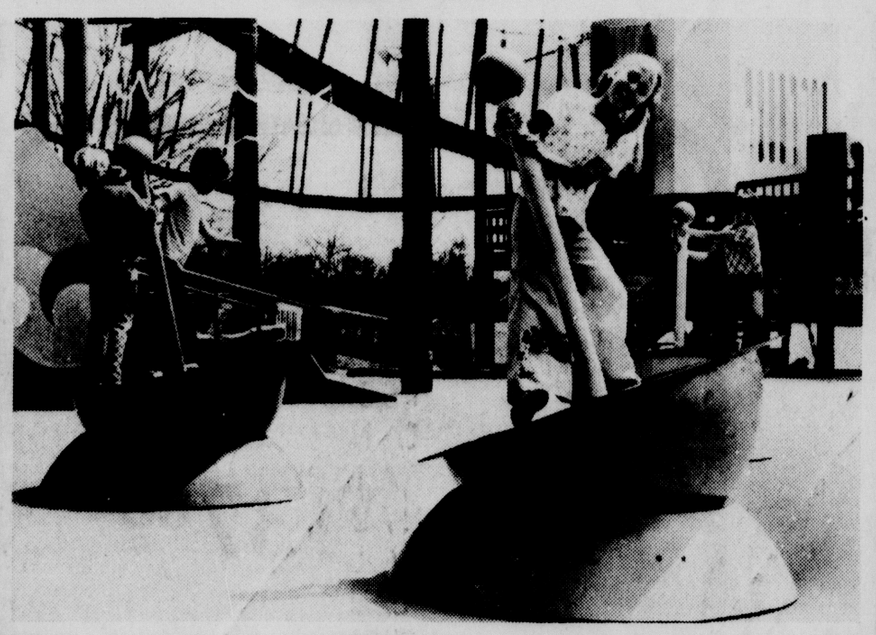
Gangway

for something new in play facilities. Without a single machinery-driven ride, Cap'n Kids World still is packing the younger set in at Sea World of Ohio, near Cleveland. It is a do-your-own-thing concept where enjoyment is limited only by the extent of imagination. In a child's imagination, the seven-foot, foam-filled punching bags at left are buccaneers — and the game is called Punch-a-Bunch-a-Pirates. This and other activities such as the Cannon Slide, below left, and Balancing Buoys, below right, allow children to do safely what they do best — run, jump, climb, slide, swing, roll, bounce and balance.

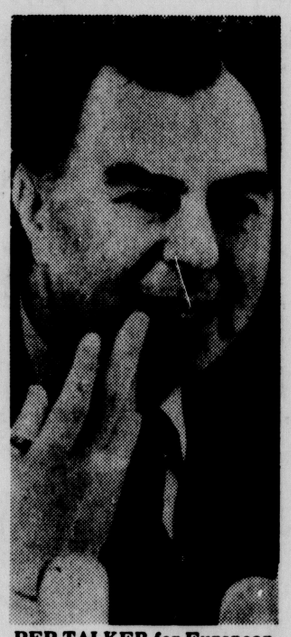


Walk the Plank, left, a swaying, 150-foot rope suspension bridge is the only activity at Cap'n Kids World where adults may try their sea legs. The net asset, right, of all of this to the playing customers would appear to be pure pleasure.

ENRICO Berlinguer poses a problem for NATO. He could be the first Communist to hold power in a Western government since the immediate post-World War II period if his party, as expected, scores major gains in Italy's June elections.

SUMMER SHIRTS for the men of '76 are subtly evolutionary, with natural fibers, earth tones and soft club figures against solid whites or off-whites gaining a firm hold among this year's toned-down prints. This "raggedy patch" style in reverse weave poly cotton is a perfect weekend casual. (By Paco Ribera for Cortefiel.)

COMFORTABLY DRESSY — Perfect for a busy schedule, this all-cotton, three-piece design by Albert Capraro will easily take 1976 Maid of Cotton Victoria Laughlin from morning through late afternoon. The taupe and bone print features a wrap skirt, belted jacket with slash side pockets, and a solid knit bone blouse.



PEP TALKER for European unity, Belgian Premier Leo Tindemans has urged the Common Market nations to accelerate development of common foreign economic and defense policies. The building of Europe, he warns, has "lost its air of adventure."

Farm bureau treasurer honored

ORAN — Election of new board members, adoption of resolutions for the coming year and recognition of Irma Buck of Commerce, farm bureau treasurer, was the main order of business at the annual meeting of the Scott County Farm Bureau Thursday in Oran.

President Elsie Streeter recognized Mrs. Buck's 25 year service as treasurer of the county farm bureau and her 35 years as a bureau member.

Mrs. Buck was presented a corsage and congratulated by past president Roy Harper.

New officers elected to represent townships in the county include: Mr. and Mrs. Larry Goesche, Kelso and Moreland township; Mr. and Mrs. Hays Laseter, Commerce and Tywappity Township; Don Beggs and Kathryn Todt, Morley and Sandwood Township; C.B. Taylor Jr. and Elsie Streeter, Sylvania Township; and Mr. and Mrs. Emil Schuchart, Richland Township.

Carl Todt of Sikeston Route One, chairman of the county association's policy action committee, submitted a list of 32 resolutions to be approved and sent to the farm bureau state headquarters. Among the key resolutions were proposals that farmers need not be certified to handle pesticides, but that more training be made available in the application of chemicals; that opposition be continued to government control of soybean and feed grain reserves; that the Occupational Safety and Health Act be repealed; that the sales tax on food and drugs not be removed unless it also taken off machinery and a portion allotted back to county government.

Bob Wright of Sikeston, president of Production Credit Association, spoke on the relationship of Farmers and credit associations which he said work hand-in-hand to supply and produce the commodities the nation needs.

3 Americans killed by terrorists

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Urban guerrillas ambushed a car carrying three Americans and killed them with a barrage of automatic weapons fire in a Tehran suburb Saturday morning, Iranian officials said.

The Iranian government blamed the killing of the three civilians on the same "Islamic Marxists" who have killed three U.S. military officers since 1973.

The U.S. Embassy said the dead men, all from California, were employes of Rockwell International working on a research project for the Iranian government. A spokesman for Rockwell, a U.S. defense contractor, declined to disclose the nature of the project.

The embassy said Ambassador Richard Helms conveyed his deepest condolences to the families of the dead, saying, "This brutal and mindless crime serves no cause and demonstrates the heartless cruelty of the perpetrators." Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi also expressed his sincere regrets, the embassy said.

A spokesman for the Autonetics Group, a Rockwell division in Anaheim, Calif., identified the dead as William C. Cottrell Jr. of Los Gatos, Autonetics' overseas manager; Robert R. Krongard of Sunnyvale, engineering manager; and Donald G. Smith of Yorba Linda, acting logistics manager.

All three were 43 years old, married and had their families with them in Iran, the spokesman said. Cottrell and Krongard both had two children, he said.

Rockwell and other American firms have some 24,000 civilians in Iran, many of them technicians training Iranians to use new U.S. weapons systems. Others are developing Iran's economy and industry.

The Iranian government said several guerrillas blocked the Americans' automobile in the suburan area of Tehran-nou as they drove to work in morning rush-hour traffic. They sprayed the car with machine-gun fire and then fled, a statement said.

"It all happened in one or two minutes," the newspaper Kayhan said. It printed a drawing and a map showing how the killers blocked the Americans' car as it turned into a side street.

The "terrorists got out of their Volkswagen, pointed a machine gun toward the car in which the Americans were, fired and then disappeared," the paper said. A witness said there were no more than three gunmen.

Iranian officials said clues found at the scene and the similar tactics used indicated the killers were members of the same insurgent group that assassinated Army Col. Lewis Hopkins in early 1973 and Air Force Lt. Cols. Paul R. Schaffer and Jack J. Turner in May 1975.

Iranian authorities convicted and executed 10 persons for those killings and the deaths of five Iranians, including a police brigadier general. Officials say police and security forces killed 17 terrorists in three separate shoutouts earlier this year.

Callers identifying themselves as terrorists told the Associated Press after the 1975 killings they made Americans their targets to make headlines in U.S. newspapers.

Iran's government, tightly controlled by the shah, depicts the guerrillas or terrorists it is fighting as extreme leftists but has never made their exact nature clear.

Maddox, Dyke head Independant ticket

CHICAGO (AP) — William Dyke, former mayor of Madison, Wis., won the American Independent party's vice presidential nomination Saturday night, rounding out a ticket headed by former Georgia Gov. Lester Maddox.

Maddox, who won the party's presidential nomination Friday night, endorsed Dyke shortly before the balloting for the No. 2 spot.

The convention hall was half-empty as delegates completed the 1976 ticket for the party which nominated George Wallace in 1968 but has been on the political backroads ever since.

Dyke received 173 2-3 votes to 96 1-12 votes for Daniel Hansen, once an American Independent candidate for governor of Nevada, and 12¼ votes for Tom Sloan of New Jersey, a college professor and self-described "battled-scarred veteran of the wars against liberalism."

Eileen Knowland Shearer, wife of the party's chairman and a distant relative of former U.S. Sen. William Knowland of California, also was nominated, but she withdrew after Maddox declared for Dyke.

Dyke, 46, was mayor of Madison for two terms but was defeated in 1973 by incumbent Paul Soglin, a former University of Wisconsin campus activist. Dyke also failed in a challenge to Democratic Gov. Patrick Lucey of Wisconsin.

Maddox, Dyke head Independant ticket

CHICAGO (AP) — William Dyke, former mayor of Madison, Wis., won the American Independent party's vice presidential nomination Saturday night, rounding out a ticket headed by former Georgia Gov. Lester Maddox.

Maddox, who won the party's presidential nomination Friday night, endorsed Dyke shortly before the balloting for the No. 2 spot.

Market goes down with Reagan

By CROCKETT SCOTT

Market reaction downward to Ronald Reagan's loss of the nomination had been anticipated for many weeks by professional traders.

Now they will study and speculate upon the President's campaign during the next few weeks; and if he and Sen. Dole appear to be gaining on Jimmy Carter, they well may put more cash into equities.

As reported previously here, investment bankers and traders have adjudged the popularity of the Democratic presidential team as bad news for the stock market. And many of their number long have believed that the former California governor would have made a more able campaigner than the President.

So a sell-off on Gerald Ford's nomination certainly was no surprise.

The possibly greater likelihood of the election of Carter and Mondale, with Ford and Dole the opposition, is a gloomy prospect for veteran traders and investors.

The Democratic hopefuls, market sources insist, are protagonists for big spending and even bigger government—with more services, higher taxes and more restrictions on business and industry.

In such a climate stock market, veterans believe profits can be expected to shrink, dividends likely will be cut and stock market prices quite naturally would in all probability trend to the downside.

But the stockmarket, of course, moves up and down on emotion and in anticipation of future events.

Hence, traders continue to watch for signs of what are hoped to be significant.

Drew Position—"The prolonged sideways movement of the past few months must be considered either accumulation or distribution.

"It is the point where bullish and bearish forces have come into balance. Eventually, a combination of fear, greed, worry and economic fact will cause the scales to tip one way or the other. In the meantime, all we can do is try to assess all available information in an attempt to determine the line of least resistance. We continue to feel that downside risk is greater than upside potentail."

United Business and Investment Report — "To be sure, a 7.8 per cent jobless rate is neither economically nor politically healthy. But there are certain factors that mitigate the last two months' climb back to that level. The rise has been the result of a swelling work force, rather than a shrinkage of jobs, in fact, the number of persons at work actually advanced by a quarter million in July despite the rise in the unemployment rate.

"Women accounted for most of the increase, inviting the conclusion that they were returning to the job market in response to brighter work prospects. The average duration of unemployment has also dipped. The jobless rate may prove more resistant to decline than first thought, but the trend should be downward in the months ahead."

United Business and Investment Report likes agriculture as a long-term growth industry, despite the hazards of politics and the possible effects of a new administration on the business climate.

"Agriculture is a growth industry," notes the service. "It will have its inevitable ups and downs, but an expanding world population must be fed—and the U.S. will be doing much of the feeding. For many companies this will mean a bountiful harvest of sales and profits long term, but their more immediate prospects vary widely."

United Business Service likes Deere, noting that "Deere, with farmers in many parts of the world enjoying record cash receipts, continues to sell all of the large tractors and combines it can make." It rates the common stock of John Deere a buy.

The service rates Massey Ferguson a speculative buy. On Dekalb Research and Pioneer Hi Bred Internation, it places a buy recommendation.

Land bank lowers interest rates

The interest rates on Federal Land Bank loans will be lowered one- quarter per cent on Sept. 1, according to an announcement by Glenn E. Heitz, President of the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis. Hal F. Robertson, manager of the Federal Land Bank Association of Sikeston, explains that the reduction is the second decrease in the interest rate this year. A similar one-quarter per cent reduction was made on June 1.

"Two interest rate decreases during 1976 result from favorable costs of money in the nation's money markets and from the Land Bank's unprecedented volume of loans. These reductions demonstrate the merits of variable interest rate loans in providing credit at the lowest cost related to money market conditions," Robertson said.

He explained that all loans made by the bank since August 1969 have provided that the interest rate can be changed as money costs of the system change.

Borrowers having variable rate loans are given at least a 20-day written notice of any rate changes affecting their loan.

The principal source of funds for lending operations of the Federal Land Banks is through the sale of bonds to investors.

Robertson explained that because Land Bank bonds are so highly regarded by investors, they traditionally carry reasonable interest rates. The interest rate paid on Land Bank bonds depends on general economic conditions and fluctuates as the system competes for loan funds in the money markets.

The Federal Land Bank is cooperatively owned by the members who do business with it. "Because we are owned by the members and because all borrowers have the privilege of paying their loans off without any penalty, we will always be striving to maintain the lowest possible interest cost for our members," Robertson said.

About 27,500 Federal Land Bank borrowers in Illiinois, Missouri and Arkansas, the three states served by the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis, have been notified that their loan rates are being lowered.

There are 45,000 Land Bank loans in the three states, totaling $1.8 billion.

The Federal Land Bank Asocition of Sikeston serves Scott, New Madrid, Mississippi, Stoddard and Cape Girardeau counties and has 863 loans totaling $34,151,640.61. Approximately 59 per cent of the 863 loans outstanding in the five counties served by the Federal Land Bank Association of Sikeston will have the rate reduced.

Appeals for railroad merger fails

ST.LOUIS -- The Interstate Commerce Commission has has denied appeals from its original May 10 order approving merger of the Texas & Pacific Railway and the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad into the Missouri Pacific Railroad. In an order served in Washington on Aug. 18, the ICC authorized the merger to be effected 20 days from that date, Sept. 7.

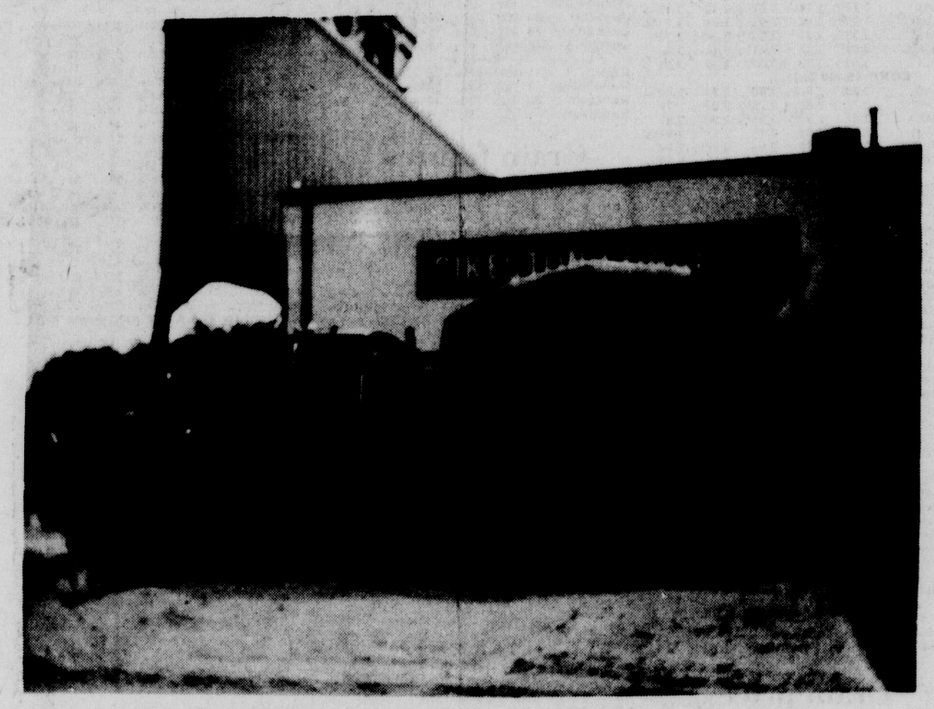
A spokesman said that there will be no significant changes in the operation of the new Missouri Pacific. He pointed out that the three properties have been operating as a single system for several years with coordination of facilities and functions as well as common management.

The three railroads which will comprise the new Missouri Pacific operate over 12,000 miles of railroad in 12 states in the Midwest, South and Southwest, extending south from Chicago to the Gulf of Mexico and west from St. Louis and Memphis to Omaha, Pueblo, Colo., and El Paso, Tex.

The primary benefits of the merger will be corporate simplification.

Shareholders of the three railroads overwhelmingly approved merger in October 1974. The merger plan provides that all outstanding shares of the T&P and C&EI will be exchanged for new shares of the Missouri Pacific at the ratio of 9.5 shares of MoPac stock for each share of T&P outstanding and 1.1 shares of MoPac Common stock for each share of C&EI outstanding. Involved in the transaction would be 972,772 shares of MoPac Common stock.

Merger of the three companies will be consummated as a statutory merger, with MoPac as the surviving company acquiring all assets and assuming all liabilities of the T&P and C&EI.



Celebrates 30th year

During July, Sikeston Concrete Products Co., Inc., 220 S. Ingram St., celebrated its 30th year in business with a 28 per cent increase in sales over any previous month in the firm's history. For their extra effort and hard work, the employes and their families were treated to a catfish dinner at Reelfoot Lake near Tiptonville, Tenn.

Law warns diggers of utility cables

Phone customers whose service is interrupted by careless digger are losers, but diggers who damage buried utility lines in Missouri can be losers, too, under a law recently signed by Gov. Christopher S. Bond.

Effective Aug. 13, the Underground Facility Safety and Damage Act makes it illegal to dig in any public street, alley or right-of-way before checking with utilities or municipalities who have underground lines.

Deloris Hunt, manager of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. office in Sikeston, said that within 30 days after the Aug. 13 effective date of the act, the company will file with the recorder of deeds in every county and municipality of 2,000 or more residents the person, address and phone number to call to locate buried phone cable.

Under the new law, if underground lines are damaged because the digger failed to notify the appropriate office, the offender is liable for the cost of damages and is subject to penalty.

Hurt said the law should further insure uninterrupted service.

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Nearly 700 worldwide hotels in the Ramada Inn system are listed in a new 90-page directory for Sept. 7 to Dec. 31. The directory is the largest ever published by the hotel firm.

Using the theme, "Easier Than Ever to Stay at a Ramada Inn," the directory is set off by the use of autumn colors on the front and back covers. It can be recognized by the title, "Fall 1976 Directory."

Featured are the locations, special inns facilties symbols, room rates and tax structures, and other useful information about 671 Ramada Inns on five continents. More than 300 of these are located within 15 minutes of an airport.

The new directory also highlights nearby points of interest for Ramada Inns, such as historic attractions and vacation and recreation spots. Many Ramada Inns have new themed restaurants.

Included for the first time is a planning calendar. It covers the period September 1976 through January 1977. There is a list of credit cards accepted by Ramada Inns worldwide and a place to record the numbers in case of theft or loss. Also included for the first time is a mileage map showing distances between major U.S. cities.

Repeated in the new directory are features which were popular in earlier editions. These include a colorful road atlas showing the interstate system of highways and other major routes, a travel planning checklist, an auto checklist and a travel expense record for both car and personal expenses.

Of special interest to the travel trade, such as tour operators, travel agents and corporate travel planners, is a list of special services offices in eight U.S. and nine international cities. Included for the first time are listings for Boston and Toronto.

Farm credit bank president resigns

ST. LOUIS — T.R. McGuire, president of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of St. Louis, has stepped down from that position, according to an announcement by A.M. Feland III, chairman of the bank's board of directors. Feland said McGuire will continue to serve the bank in the position of special consultant.

McGuire's service with the Farm Credit System spans nearly two and a half decades. His career with the bank began in 1955, and in May 1969, he was elected and has since served as the bank's president.

Feland concurrently announced that Harry Chlebowski, president of the Bank for Cooperatives, has been named acting president of the Credit Bank and will serve as its chief executive officer until a new president has been elected.

The Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of St. Louis supervises and provides loan funds to the Sixth Farm Credit District's 44 Production Credit Associations. The Sixth District PCAs are farmer-owned credit cooperatives which provide short and intermediate term credit to nearly 40,000 farm families in Arkansas, Illinois and Missouri.

In 1975, the 44 associations made loans of nearly $1.8 billion to their farmer-members, and will extend production and capital credit this year of approximately $2 billion to eligible farm operators.

The FICB-PCA network is a part of the nationwide Farm Credit System which provides complete financing to America's farmers and their cooperatives through the 12 Federal Land Banks, the 13 Banks for Cooperatives and the 12 Federal Intermediate Credit Banks.

The Farm Credit System, through the 37 Farm Credit Banks and their constituent cooperative associations, currently have loans outstanding in excess of $35 billion with American farmers and their cooperatives.

GM raises new car prices

The nation's largest auto maker announced Wednesday that it is raising prices an average 6 per cent — $269 in the manufacturer's suggested base price and $69 for options — because of higher costs.

That means the average retail price of a 1977 G car will be $6,067, including some $1,200 worth of options. That figure does not include taxes and shipping charges, nor does it take into account discounts offered by some dealers. The average 1976 GM car retailed for $5,729.

GM's price hike, one of the highest percentage inceases in the past 20 years, was higher than the 5 per cent most financial analysts expected. It was far short, however, of the record $450 boost set on 1975 models.

GM, traditionally the first company to set new-model prices, is the industry's acknowledged pricing leader because it controls more than half the domestic market.

Other makers are expected to announce similar boosts within a few weeks and have hinted they might hike car prices by up to 6 per cent.

The GM increases range from $22 for the Oldsmobile Starfire to $708 for the plush Cadillac Seville. GM's lowest-priced car for 1977, the two-seater mini Chevette Scooter, will retail for $2,999 — compared with $2,899 this year. The Seville will carry the highest price at $13,359. Neither price includes options, shipping charges and taxes.

In Washington, an official of the Council on Wage and Price Stability said the council already was studying information on prices and costs in the auto industry and indicated there would be no new action taken as a result of the GM price increase.

Declares dividends

KANSAS CITY — The board of directors of Interstate Brands Corp. Wednesday declared the regular third- quarter dividend of 20 cents per common share and $1.20 per share on the preferred.

Both dividends are payale Oct. 1, to holders of records Sept. 15.

Interstate Brands corp. is the nation's third- largest wholesale baking firm, producing and distributing bread and cake products from 33 plants across the country.

Westavco announces 3 for 2 stock split

NEW YORK — Westvaco Corp., a major producer of paper, packaging and specialty chemicals, has reported record sales and major earnings gains for the third quarter and nine months, ended July 31, increased its common dividend for the 10th time in 13 years and split its common stock on a 3-for-2 basis.

Buoyed by steadily improving demand, third quarter sales reached a new high of $233 million, surpassing sales of $191 million in the corresponding period a year ago by 22 per cent. For the nine months, sales came to $689 million, a gain of 21 per cent over $572 million a year ago.

Third quarter earnings of $14.4 million, equal to $1.29 a share, rose 62 per cent over earnings of $8.9 million, or 80 cents a share, in the same period last year. For the year to date, earnings were $39.6 million, or $3.55 a share, a gain of 52 per cent over earnings of $26.1 million, or $2.34 a share, for the first nine months of 1975.

Adjusted to reflect the stock split, third quarter per-share earnings in 1976 were 86 cents vs. 53 cents in 1975, and nine-month per-share earnings in 1976 were $2.36, compared to $1.56 in 1975.

The company's board of directors increased the quarterly dividend on Westvaco common stock before the split from 37.5 cents a share to 41.25 cents a share, payable Oct. 1 to shareholders of record Sept. 7.

This boosts the annual dividend rate before the split from $1.50 to $1.65 a share, a new record, and establishes a quarterly dividend rate of 27.5 cents a share and an annual dividend rate of $1.10 a share on the split stock.

The board's action gives Westvaco shareholders a compounded annual dividend increase of 8 per cent since 1963 and also extends to 81 years the company's record of uninterrupted quarterly cash dividends one of the longest among companies listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

David L. Luke III, Westvaco president, said the decision to raise the dividend was based on the company's strong financial position and its vigorous earnings performance in fiscal 1976, as well as the encouraging future outlook.

The stock split, in the form of a 50 per cent stock dividend, gives shareholders an additional share of common stock for each two shares held on the record date of Sept. 7. It will increase the company's outstanding shares of common stock from approximately 11,200,000 to 16,800,000.

Certificates for the new shares will be mailed to shareholders on Oct. 1. Certificates will be issued for full shares only. Shareholders who are eligible for half-shares as a result of the split, will have the option of buying an additional half-share or selling a half-share for cash.

Luke said the stock split was prompted by the company's consistent growth. He noted that the company's sales and earning capacity has more than doubled since its common stock was last split on a 2-for-1 basis in 1968.

Luke said the company's financial position is strong and that it has no current plans to issue a new equity offering.

Consumer Tire Guide is available

PUEBLO, Colo. — Buying tires is an expense no one looks forward to. When the tread on your tires tells you the car's ready for some new ones, be sure you know what to look for when you shop.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reminds you to get the same tire size that came with the car, or optional sizes recommended either by the car or tire manufacturer. For more shopping and tire care tips, send for a copy of Consumer Tire Guide. It's free from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 43, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

For your safety, as well as easier handling of your car, your tires should be of the same type of construction on all four wheels (e.g. all radial, all bias ply, etc.)

If you're buying only two new tires at a time, put them on the rear wheels for better traction and extra protection against flats. A single new tire should be paired on the rear axle with the tire having the most tread of the other three.

Remember that proper inflation is the most important rule in tire safety and tire mileage.

Summer or winter, be sure to check the air in your tires every two or three weeks and before long trips. Check the pressure when the tires are cool. This is because pressure can increase up to six pounds or more when tires are hot from driving. Cold weather reduces tire pressure about a pound with every 10-degree drop in the temperature.

To get the longest life from your tires, rotate them according to the instructions from your car owner's manual. Or, if you can't find the manual, rotate your tires every 6,000 to 8,000 miles.

Get in the habit of inspecting your tires for unusual wear, cuts, blisters, tread separation or other kinds of damage. Removing nails, small stones, or bits of glass stuck in the thread will help prevent your tires from going flat.

Consumer Tire Guide (free) is one of over 250 selected federal consumer publications listed in the fall edition of the catalog, Consumer Information.

Meat regulations may be altered

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer group said Tuesday that proposed new government meat rules will let processors put bits of bone in hot dogs, garbage scraps in canned beef stew and simmered fat in a variety of prepared food products.

The new meat regulations are being considered by the Agriculture Department, which contends that the changes will enable processors to reclaim significant amounts of protein and thereby help consumers with their meat budgets.

But the Public Citizens' Health Research Group said the proposals "should be seen for what they are — rules for turning garbage into money — and rejected."

Processors currently are allowed o salvage meat from bones and fat under temporary rules announced last spring. The proposed regulations, if adopted, will put them on a permanent footing.

Market goes down with Reagan

By CROCKETT SCOTT

Market reaction downward to Ronald Reagan's loss of the nomination had been anticipated for many weeks by professional traders.

Now they will study and speculate upon the President's campaign during the next few weeks; and if he and Sen. Dole appear to be gaining on Jimmy Carter, they well may put more cash into equities.

As reported previously here, investment bankers and traders have adjudged the popularity of the Democratic presidential team as bad news for the stock market. And many of their number long have believed that the former California governor would have made a more able campaigner than the President.

So a sell-off on Gerald Ford's nomination certainly was no surprise.

The possibly greater likelihood of the election of Carter and Mondale, with Ford and Dole the opposition, is a gloomy prospect for veteran traders and investors.

The Democratic hopefuls, market sources insist, are protagonists for big spending and even bigger government—with more services, higher taxes and more restrictions on business and industry.

In such a climate stock market, veterans believe profits can be expected to shrink, dividends likely will be cut and stock market prices quite naturally would in all probability trend to the downside.

But the stockmarket, of course, moves up and down on emotion and in anticipation of future events.

Hence, traders continue to watch for signs of what are hoped to be significant.

Drew Position—"The prolonged sideways movement of the past few months must be considered either accumulation or distribution.

"It is the point where bullish and bearish forces have come into balance. Eventually, a combination of fear, greed, worry and economic fact will cause the scales to tip one way or the other. In the meantime, all we can do is try to assess all available information in an attempt to determine the line of least resistance. We continue to feel that downside risk is greater than upside potentail."

United Business and Investment Report — "To be sure, a 7.8 per cent jobless rate is neither economically nor politically healthy. But there are certain factors that mitigate the last two months' climb back to that level. The rise has been the result of a swelling work force, rather than a shrinkage of jobs, in fact, the number of persons at work actually advanced by a quarter million in July despite the rise in the unemployment rate.

"Women accounted for most of the increase, inviting the conclusion that they were returning to the job market in response to brighter work prospects. The average duration of unemployment has also dipped. The jobless rate may prove more resistant to decline than first thought, but the trend should be downward in the months ahead."

United Business and Investment Report likes agriculture as a long-term growth industry, despite the hazards of politics and the possible effects of a new administration on the business climate.

"Agriculture is a growth industry," notes the service. "It will have its inevitable ups and downs, but an expanding world population must be fed—and the U.S. will be doing much of the feeding. For many companies this will mean a bountiful harvest of sales and profits long term, but their more immediate prospects vary widely."

United Business Service likes Deere, noting that "Deere, with farmers in many parts of the world enjoying record cash receipts, continues to sell all of the large tractors and combines it can make." It rates the common stock of John Deere a buy.

The service rates Massey Ferguson a speculative buy. On Dekalb Research and Pioneer Hi Bred Internation, it places a buy recommendation.

Land bank lowers interest rates

The interest rates on Federal Land Bank loans will be lowered one- quarter per cent on Sept. 1, according to an announcement by Glenn E. Heitz, President of the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis. Hal F. Robertson, manager of the Federal Land Bank Association of Sikeston, explains that the reduction is the second decrease in the interest rate this year. A similar one-quarter per cent reduction was made on June 1.

"Two interest rate decreases during 1976 result from favorable costs of money in the nation's money markets and from the Land Bank's unprecedented volume of loans. These reductions demonstrate the merits of variable interest rate loans in providing credit at the lowest cost related to money market conditions," Robertson said.

He explained that all loans made by the bank since August 1969 have provided that the interest rate can be changed as money costs of the system change.

Borrowers having variable rate loans are given at least a 20-day written notice of any rate changes affecting their loan.

The principal source of funds for lending operations of the Federal Land Banks is through he sale of bonds to investors.

Robertson explained that because Land Bank bonds are so highly regarded by investors, they traditionally carry reasonable interest rates. The interest rate paid on Land Bank bonds depends on general economic conditions and fluctuates as the system competes for loan funds in the money markets.

The Federal Land Bank is cooperatively owned by the members who do business with it. "Because we are owned by the members and because all borrowers have the privilege of paying their loans off without any penalty, we will always be striving to maintain the lowest possible interest cost for our members," Robertson said.

About 27,500 Federal Land Bank borrowers in Illiinois, Missouri and Arkansas, the three states served by the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis, have been notified that their loan rates are being lowered.

There are 45,000 Land Bank loans in the three states, totaling $1.8 billion.

The Federal Land Bank Assocition of Sikeston serves Scott, New Madrid, Mississippi, Stoddard and Cape Girardeau counties and has 863 loans totaling $34,151,640.61. Approximately 59 per cent of the 863 loans outstanding in the five counties served by the Federal Land Bank Association of Sikeston will have the rate reduced.

Appeals for railroad merger fails

ST.LOUIS -- The Interstate Commerce Commission has has denied appeals from its original May 10 order approving merger of the Texas & Pacific Railway and the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad into the Missouri Pacific Railroad. In an order served in Washington on Aug. 18, the ICC authorized the merger to be effected 20 days from that date , Sept. 7.

A spokesman said that there will be no significant changes in the operation of the new Missouri Pacific. He pointed out that the three properties have been operating as a single system for several years with coordination of facilities and functions as well as common management.

The three railroads which will comprise the new Missouri Pacific operate over 12,000 miles of railroad in 12 states in the Midwest, South and Southwest, extending south from Chicago to the Gulf of Mexico and west from St. Louis and Memphis to Omaha, Pueblo, Colo., and El Paso, Tex.

The primary benefits of the merger will be corporate simplification.

Shareholders of the three railroads overwhelmingly approved merger in October 1974. The merger plan provides that all outstanding shares of the T&P and C&EI will be exchanged for new shares of the Missouri Pacific at the ratio of 9.5 shares of MoPac stock for each share of T&P outstanding and 1.1 shares of MoPac Common stock for each share of C&EI outstanding. Involved in the transaction would be 972,772 shares of MoPac Common stock.

Merger of the three companies will be consummated as a statutory merger, with MoPac as the surviving company acquiring all assets and assuming all liabilities of the T&P and C&EI.

Celebrates 30th year

During July, Sikeston Concrete Products Co., Inc., 220 S. Ingram St., celebrated its 30th year in business with a 28 per cent increase in sales over any previous month in the firm's history. For their extra effort and hard work, the employes and their families were treated to a catfish dinner at Reelfoot Lake near Tiptonville, Tenn.

Law warns diggers of utility cables

Phone customers whose service is interrupted by careless digger are losers, but diggers who damage buried utility lines in Missouri can be losers, too, under a law recently signed by Gov. Christopher S. Bond.

Effective Aug. 13, the Underground Facility Safety and Damage Act makes it illegal to dig in any public street, alley or right- of- way before checking with utilities or municipalities who have underground lines.

Deloris Hunt, manager of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. office in Sikeston, said that within 30 days after the Aug. 13 effective date of the act, the company will file with the recorder of deeds in every county and municipality of 2,000 or more residents the person, address and phone number to call to locate buried phone cable.

Under the new law, if underground lines are damaged because the digger failed to notify the appropriate office, the offender is liable for the cost of damages and is subject to penalty.

Hurt said the law should further insure uninterrupted service.

Farm credit bank president resigns

ST. LOUIS — T.R. McGuire, president of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of St. Louis, has stepped down from that position, according to an announcement by A.M. Feland III, chairman of the bank's board of directors. Feland said McGuire will continue to serve the bank in the position of special consultant.

McGuire's service with the Farm Credit System spans nearly two and a half decades. His career with the bank began in 1955, and in May 1969, he was elected and has since served as the bank's president.

Feland concurrently announced that Harry Chlebowski, president of the Bank for Cooperatives, has been named acting president of the Credit Bank and will serve as its chief executive officer until a new president has been elected.

The Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of St. Louis supervises and provides loan funds to the Sixth Farm Credit District's 44 Production Credit Associations. The Sixth District PCAs are farmer-owned credit cooperatives which provide short and intermediate term credit to nearly 40,000 farm families in Arkansas, Illinois and Missouri.

In 1975, the 44 associations made loans of nearly $1.8 billion to their farmer-members, and will extend production and capital credit this year of approximately $2 billion to eligible farm operators.

The FICB-PCA network is a part of the nationwide Farm Credit System which provides complete financing to America's farmers and their cooperatives through the 12 Federal Land Banks, the 13 Banks for Cooperatives and the 12 Federal Intermediate Credit Banks.

The Farm Credit System, through the 37 Farm Credit Banks and their constituent cooperative associations, currently have loans outstanding in excess of $35 billion with American farmers and their cooperatives.

GM raises new car prices

The nation's largest auto maker announced Wednesday that it is raising prices an average 6 per cent — $269 in the manufacturer's suggested base price and $69 for options — because of higher costs.

That means the average retail price of a 1977 G car will be $6,067, including some $1,200 worth of options. That figure does not include taxes and shipping charges, nor does it take into account discounts offered by some dealers. The average 1976 GM car retailed for $5,729.

GM's price hike, one of the highest percentage inceases in the past 20 years, was higher than the 5 per cent most financial analysts expected. It was far short, however, of the record $450 boost set on 1975 models.

GM, traditionally the first company to set new-model prices, is the industry's acknowledged pricing leader because it controls more than half the domestic market.

Other makers are expected to announce similar boosts within a few weeks and have hinted they might hike car prices by up to 6 per cent.

The GM increases range from $22 for the Oldsmobile Starfire to $708 for the plush Cadillac Seville. GM's lowest-priced car for 1977, the two-seater mini Chevette Scooter, will retail for $2,999 — compared with $2,899 this year. The Seville will carry the highest price at $13,359. Neither price includes options, shipping charges and taxes.

In Washington, an official of the Council on Wage and Price Stability said the council already was studying information on prices and costs in the auto industry and indicated there would be no new action taken as a result of the GM price increase.

Declares dividends

KANSAS CITY — The board of directors of Interstate Brands Corp. Wednesday declared the regular third- quarter dividend of 20 cents per common share and $1.20 per share on the preferred.

Both dividends are payale Oct. 1, to holders of records Sept. 15.

Interstate Brands corp. is the nation's third- largest wholesale baking firm, producing and distributing bread and cake products from 33 plants across the country.

Westavco announces 3 for 2 stock split

NEW YORK — Westvaco Corp., a major producer of paper, packaging and specialty chemicals, has reported record sales and major earnings gains for the third quarter and nine months, ended July 31, increased its common dividend for the 10th time in 13 years and split its common stock on a 3-for-2 basis.

Buoyed by steadily improving demand, third quarter sales reached a new high of $233 million, surpassing sales of $191 million in the corresponding period a year ago by 22 per cent. For the nine months, sales came to $689 million, a gain of 21 per cent over $572 million a year ago.

Third quarter earnings of $14.4 million, equal to $1.29 a share, rose 62 per cent over earnings of $8.9 million, or 80 cents a share, in the same period last year. For the year to date, earnings were $39.6 million, or $3.55 a share, a gain of 52 per cent over earnings of $26.1 million, or $2.34 a share, for the first nine months of 1975.

Adjusted to reflect the stock split, third quarter per-share earnings in 1976 were 86 cents vs. 53 cents in 1975, and nine-month per-share earnings in 1976 were $2.36, compared to $1.56 in 1975.

The company's board of directors increased the quarterly dividend on Westvaco common stock before the split from 37.5 cents a share to 41.25 cents a share, payable Oct. 1 to shareholders of record Sept. 7.

This boosts the annual dividend rate before the split from $1.50 to $1.65 a share, a new record, and establishes a quarterly dividend rate of 27.5 cents a share and an annual dividend rate of $1.10 a share on the split stock.

The board's action gives Westvaco shareholders a compounded annual dividend increase of 8 per cent since 1963 and also extends to 81 years the company's record of uninterrupted quarterly cash dividends one of the longest among companies listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

David L. Luke III, Westvaco president, said the decision to raise the dividend was based on the company's strong financial position and its vigorous earnings performance in fiscal 1976, as well as the encouraging future outlook.

The stock split, in the form of a 50 per cent stock dividend, gives shareholders an additional share of common stock for each two shares held on the record date of Sept. 7. It will increase the company's outstanding shares of common stock from approximately 11,200,000 to 16,800,000.

Certificates for the new shares will be mailed to shareholders on Oct. 1. Certificates will be issued for full shares only. Shareholders who are eligible for half-shares as a result of the split, will have the option of buying an additional half-share or selling a half-share for cash.

Luke said the stock split was prompted by the company's consistent growth. He noted that the company's sales and earning capacity has more than doubled since its common stock was last split on a 2-for-1 basis in 1968.

Luke said the company's financial position is strong and that it has no current plans to issue a new equity offering.

The family farm

Backbone of U.S. agriculture

Story and photos by Thomas Beardslee

American farms last year, according to Fortune Magazine, produced a record 5.8 billion bushels of corn. This was enough to provide more than 25 bushels for every man, woman and child in the United States.

Wheat production, the magazine says, stimulated by rising demand from foreign markets, also set a record: more than two billion bushels, up 19 per cent over the previous high achieved in 1974. Overall crop production exceeded 1973's record harvest.

What is the reason for this continuing success? When you get right down to it, it is the ability of the American farmer to deal with the challenges of weather and land and the capacity of the vast, American farmlands.

When we think about large farming operations, we automatically think of corporation farms, owned by businesses and investors, and run by local managers. However, more than 90 per cent of all farm acreage is still cultivated by independent farmers according to Fortune, and the family-operated farm remains the backbone of United States agriculture.

One such farming operation located in Mississippi County is Mount Level Farms Co., located near East Prairie.

Mount Level is a 6,0000-acre row crop and livestock farming operation, growing corn, wheat an soybeans, and feeding about 1,200 head of cattle.

The farm employs 22 full-time workers, in addition to "hoe hands." Boggle says there has yet to be a machine designed that can do the work of the men and women who hoe the rows.

The farm does have a few other machines, including 15 tractors of assorted types, from small ones used to cut grass to a large four-wheel-drive White.

In addition to the row crops and cattle, Bogle started planting trees to minimize the destruction of flood waters from the Mississippi River that he says visit his fields each year. He experimented with different types of trees, finding the cottonwood the best suited for his purpose.

"We have done everything wrong that can be," Bogle says in describing how he learned about forestry. "We would try one thing, and when it didn't work we would try something else. We even went to see a man in Mississippi who was an authority on cottonwoods.

Today, Bogle can stand in his fields and look at about 700 acres of trees that not only protect the soil from erosion, but make a good cash crop when the trees reach maturity and can be sold for pump wood, veneer or other uses.

According to Missouri Conservation Commission officials in New Madrid, Bogle's Mount Level Farms is one of the largest private forests in the state, and there is an application on file to designated Mount Level as a tree farm. Conservation agents says that every phase of development can be seen in Mount Level's forestry operation.

Bogle says he has fewer full-time people than he used to employ, because of the ability of newer equipment to do more work. This would seem to be a national trend, since last year's record crops were producrd by only about one-third as many farmers and farm workers as were employed in agriculture at the end of World War II.

Jim Bogle, owner and operator of Mount Level Farms near East Prairie, checks a maturing soybean crop for army worms or diseases that could damage the plants.

Radio aids farming operation

Although the huge Mount Level farming operation near East Prairie is run by aid of business band radio communications, Bogle's duties often take him into the fields where he finds farm foreman Bill Coffer overseeing the work and coordinating the workers from the farm pickup truck. Here Bogle and Coffer discuss the next day's work while checking on a soybean field in the Belmont part of the farm.

Maintaining farm equipment

Cotton defoliation will vary

Defoliation decisions in the Bootheel this fall will have to be made on a field by field basis. There is more variation in growth of cotton than has been observed in several years. The area has short, late cotton and tall, well fruited cotton of early maturity varieties like Auburn M in the Bucoda area.

It will not be profitable to defoliate short, late maturing cotton. Timing of defoliation of tall green cotton with high yielding potential is important due to lateness of crop. Area farmers can't afford to cut the yield of a short crop. As much of the crop as possible needs to be matured before applying defoliants.

Most growers know the benefits of defoliation and would like to make one application by air do the job. This has been difficult to accomplish in the Bootheel with its cool falls, since cotton farmers need all the time they can get to mature the crop.

However, as during most falls cotton growers are confronted with situations where defoliation is necessary. Timing of defoliant application to the entire cotton plant when expectant yield is high has to be a compromise between top crop maturity and bottom crop deterioration.

While waiting for top bolls to mature the bottom bolls may rot and open cotton will be exposed to several weeks of weathering before being harvested. Losses in both yield and quality may result. If overall defoliation will reduce top crop, bottom defoliation may be the answer.

The best time to make application for bottom defoliation depends upon the principal benefit desired. If trying to reduce boll rot, application should be at or just before initial boll opening. In preparation for cotton harvesting, application should be made when 15-20 per cent of the bools are open.

Care must be taken to avoid spraying too high on the plants. Keep the spray nozzle tilted slightly toward the ground so that the top edge of the spray fan is parallel to the ground. Bolls in the treated zone should be mature as determined by firmness to thumb pressure, resistance to cutting and dark seed. Yield and quality will be reduced by the number of immature bolls defoliated.

Nozzles for bottom defoliant application may be either the flooding type or the flat-fan herbicide type. Nozzles are supported behind fenders or shields of high-clearance ground sprayers so that spray is directed to all foliage in the zone to be treated.

Bottom defoliation should be followed by bottom harvesting, usually within 12 to 20 days or as soon as the bolls in the treated zone have opened.

Your area agronomy specialist is available to assist with your defoliation decisions.

Grain bin loans offered

BENTON — Low interest Commodity Credit Corporation loans are available to assist local farmers finance grain storage and drying facilities, according to Kenneth E. Vowels, executive director of the Scott County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office.

The loan program offers up to 70 per cent financing on the purchase of grain bins, dryers and various operating equipment needed to make the facility practical to operate. The rate of interest is 7.5 per cent and the term of the loan is five years with four equal installments.

Loans of less than $10,000 may be approved at the local level by the ASC County Committee. Loans of $10,000 or ore require a lien on the real estate on which the facility is located and must be reviewed by the ASC State Committee. The maximum loan attainable is $25,000.

"Farmers interested in securing a facility loan should present an itemized invoice listing the equipment to be purchased to the county ASC Office in Benton and file their application," says Vowels. The application may be filed any time, but in no case later than 30 days after the facility is delivered to the farm.

Further information may be obtained by telephoning the scott County ASCS office, 545-3593.

Hay directory will list sellers

COLUMBIA — Missouri hay growers are urged to list their names in the 1976 Missouri Hay Directory, according to Howell Wheaton, extension agronomist at the University of Missouri-Columbia.

The directory lists those who expect to have hay to sell each winter. It is published by the Missouri Department of Agriculture and agricultural extension at UMC.

Potential hay sellers may be included in the directory by giving their name, address and phone number to any local extension center or to the Missouri Department of Agriculture, Box 630, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101.

Sellers are asked to specify type of hay and expected quantity for sale, according to Wheaton.

Deadline for getting information turned in for the list is Nov. 1. The directory will be available about Dec. 15.

111 million acres could be cropland

The United States has 111 million acres of land not now in crops that could be converted to cropland if needed, according to a new study by the Soil Conservation Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The acreage, which has either a "high" or "medium" potential for conversion to crops, is roughly equivalent to the total U.S. acreage planted in corn, oats and sorghum last year. Total acres planted in all crops last year totaled 400 million.

The "potential cropland study" was conducted by SCS field people at 41,000 sites in 506 counties selected on a random basis. Sites were located in all 50 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, and were limited to non-federal land. The study was begun in May 1975 by the agency in response to a mounting volume of requests for current estimates of available cropland.

The study identifies three different acreages of potential cropland that could be switched to crops with varying degrees of difficulty and expense.

First, 24 million acres of "prime farmland" could be converted simply by beginning tillage. These soils would require little or no protection from erosion and, with normal rainfall, should produce high yields.

Second, the study identifies an additional 54 million acres of "high potential" land that would require some soil and water management to prevent erosion and sedimentation or to dispose of unwanted water.

Finally, there is another 33 million acres with "medium potential" for conversion to crops. These acres pose more serious erosion hazards and water disposal problems and would cost more to convert. Nevertheless, soil conservationists see no reason why, with application of current technology, these acres could not be used for crops if the need arises.

SCS questions whether acreages beyond this 111-million-acre total could be brought into cropland safely. The conservation agency's estimate of convertible land is considerably lower than previous estimates, which have run as high as 266 million acres.

The agency also found that about two million acres of farmland are being "irreversibly" lost each year to urban buildup, with an additional one million acres going under water in ponds, lakes and reservoirs.

Wheat variety trials information is given

By THOMAS BROWN
Area agronomy specialist

BLOOMFIELD — Wheat seeding time is just around the corner and many farmers are wondering what variety to plant this year.

Results of wheat variety trials conducted at the Univesity of Missouri Delta Center at Portageville show a comparison of varieties included in the trials during recent years. The following yield data might serve as a guide to farmers, as to varieties that they might want to plant this season:

Variety	Yield, Bu. Per Acre 1971-75	1973-75
Arthur	40.0	35.0
Stoddard	40.5	33.8
Blueboy II (1)	40.3	39.4
McNair 4823 (1)	41.0	36.8
Coker 68-15 (1)	39.3	36.3
Abe (1)	35.9	33.4
Arthur 71	39.6	35.9
Oasis		35.3
Double-Crop		41.2
Hart (2)	44.0	38.2

(1) four-year average
(2) two-year average

The five- year average yeilds (1971-75) will serve as a more dependable guide for the selection of varieties for those that have been tested that long. Three - year average results (1973-75) were also outlined to show yields of newer varieties that have only been in the trials for three years.

Hart is a new Missouri variety which is being released to certified seed growers this year. It is similar to Arthur in height and compares favorably as far as lodging is concerned. It is also similar to Arthur in test weight. It rated significantly better than Arthur in leaf rust resistance and compares favorably with this variety as far as resistance or tolerance to other diseases is concerned.

Double- Crop was developed at the University of Arkansas for double cropping purposes. It is a selection out of Arthur which matures three to five days earlier than Arthur.

Although this variety compared favorably with Arthur in the two-year average yields in the above table, it did not yield as well as Arthur in the 1976 yield trials. It has compared favorably with Arthur in disease resistance, height, lodging and test weight.

McNair 4823, a high- yielding commercial variety matures a little later than Arthur. It is approximately the same height as Arthur and compares favorably in lodging and test weight. It has good resistance to leaf rust and some races of stem rust, but is somewhat susceptible to mildew.

Coker 68-15 is a commercial semi-dwarf variety that is very short and stiff- strawed. It has good yielding ability, high test weight and is resistant to leaf rust and soil- borne mosaic.

Additional information pertaining to wheat varieties may be obtained upon request from county Unviersity of Missouri Extension Center.

Charleston FFA group among winners

SEDALIA — Members of the Future Farmers of America chapter at Charleston High School were among the winners at this year's Missouri State Fair.

The Charleston chapter took top honors in the tandem livestock trailer, with top class, and won a silver medal in the hay feeder class.

According to Charleston vocational agriculture staff members, the students built the entries with welding and other metal- working techniques. This is the fourth year the Charleston group has had entries in the state fair.

Other members winning individual awards included gold awars in the miscellaneous or small projects class to Bert Johnson, Allen McKinley, Doug Plummer, Sara Brink and Anthony Wallace.

Cotton defoliation will vary

Defoliation decisions in the Bootheel this fall will have to be made on a field by field basis. There is more variation in growth of cotton than has been observed in several years. The area has short, late cotton and tall, well fruited cotton of early maturity varieties like Auburn M in the Bucoda area.

It will not be profitable to defoliate short, late maturing cotton. Timing of defoliation of tall green cotton with high yielding potential is important due to lateness of crop. Area farmers can't afford to cut the yield of a short crop. As much of the crop as possible needs to be matured before applying defoliants.

Most growers know the benefits of defoliation and would like to make one application by air do the job. This has been difficult to accomplish in the Bootheel with its cool falls, since cotton farmers need all the time they can get to mature the crop.

However, as during most falls cotton growers are confronted with situations where defoliation is necessary. Timing of defoliant application to the entire cotton plant when expectant yield is high has to be a compromise between top crop maturity and bottom crop deterioration.

While waiting for top bolls to mature the bottom bolls may rot and open cotton will be exposed to several weeks of weathering before being harvested. Losses in both yield and quality may result. If overall defoliation will reduce top crop, bottom defoliation may be the answer.

The best time to make application for bottom defoliation depends upon the principal benefit desired. If trying to reduce boll rot, application should be at or just before initial boll opening. In preparation for cotton harvesting, application should be made when 15-20 per cent of the bools are open.

Care must be taken to avoid spraying too high on the plants. Keep the spray nozzle tilted slightly toward the ground so that the top edge of the spray fan is parallel to the ground. Bolls in the treated zone should be mature as determined by firmness to thumb pressure, resistance to cutting and dark seed. Yield and quality will be reduced by the number of immature bolls defoliated.

Nozzles for bottom defoliant application may be either the flooding type or the flat-fan herbicide type. Nozzles are supported behind fenders or shields of high-clearance ground sprayers so that spray is directed to all foliage in the zone to be treated.

Bottom defoliation should be followed by bottom harvesting, usually within 12 to 20 days or as soon as the bolls in the treated zone have opened.

Your area agronomy specialist is available to assist with your defoliation decisions.

Grain bin loans offered

BENTON — Low interest Commodity Credit Corporation loans are available to assist local farmers finance grain storage and drying facilities, according to Kenneth E. Vowels, executive director of the Scott County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office.

The loan program offers up to 70 per cent financing on the purchase of grain bins, dryers and various operating equipment needed to make the facility practical to operate. The rate of interest is 7.5 per cent and the term of the loan is five years with four equal installments.

Loans of less than $10,000 may be approved at the local level by the ASC County Committee. Loans of $10,000 or ore require a lien on the real estate on which the facility is located and must be reviewed by the ASC State Committee. The maximum loan attainable is $25,000.

"Farmers interested in securing a facility loan should present an itemized invoice listing the equipment to be purchased to the county ASC Office in Benton and file their application," says Vowels. The application may be filed any time, but in no case later than 30 days after the facility is delivered to the farm.

Further information may be obtained by telephoning the scott County ASCS office, 545-3593.

Area to begin corn harvesting

BENTON - Most of the early planted corn is about mature and harvest will start within the next week or so. The corn crop looks very good. I expect to hear of 150 bushels per acre or more on many farms.

The Southwestern corn borer is present in most fields to some extent. Farmers that applied furadan at planting have less corn down than those that didn't use it. However, the high winds Aug. 13 and 14 blew down a good bit of corn. Stalks were weakened due to stalk rot, corn borer and-or low potash.

Farmers will need to do a good job of harvesting and drying the corn. The ears will be infected with various types of rot when they come in contact with moist soil.

Not much has been heard about aflatoxin lately, but precautions still need to be taken to prevent the fungus in stored corn. Most of the elevators didn't say much about it last year, and from what I can find out, they won't be checking too closely this year.

The aflatoxin fungus starts in the field, but multiplies rapidly in storage if conditions are right. In order to decrease the chance of having aflatoxin in your corn, the following guidelines should be followed:

1. Harvest corn promptly when mature. If drying equipment is available, harvest at 22-25 per cent moisture.

2. Adjust picker cylinder to lowest speed and widest clearance that will give adequate shelling. Less cracking occurs at low cylinder speeds. Cracking and other damage encourage mold growth and attracts insects.

3. Adjust picker for maximum cleaning of moist trash and green matter.

4. Do not hold high moisture corn in wagons, trucks or other similar holding areas longer than six hours. High moisture corn awaiting drying should be placed in a "holding bin" and air forced through it to keep it cool.

5. Corn that collects in auger wells and pits around dump stations frequently contain aflatoxin fungus. This can be a ready source of contamination to corn as it is put into storage. Clean these areas thoroughly before and after harvest.

6. Dry corn to 12 per cent moisture for safe storage within 24 hours after harvest. Do not harvest more than bins are capable of drying in this time period.

7. Corn in bins should be aerated regularly during storage to prevent sweating when outside temperatures drop. Do not operate fans during periods of rainfall or high humidity.

There are four methods being used to detect A. flavus and-or aflatoxin. Only one is commonly used in southeast Missouri. This is the ultra-violet light referred to as the "black light" test. This test is not 100 per cent accurate, but may be better than nothing.

If there is a "flourescence" in grain samples when subjected to the black light, it is assumed that aflatoxin is present. Several other molds also show a flourescence so this test can be completely erroneous.

Another method of detection is the U-V or millicolumn test. This method has been found to be reasonably quick and accurate. The test accurately tells if aflatoxin is present, but does not tell the exact amount.

This test will be available to farmers in southeast Missouri this year. If the Black LIght test is used on your corn and molds are found that show a flourescence, and corn is rejected, I recommend you have the U-V test made. Follow these steps for obtaining a sample and getting it tested:

1. Randomly take a 15-pound sample from the load of corn.

2. Put corn in a clean bag or container.

3. Take sample directly to Plant Health Clinic at the Delta Center in Portageville.

4. Sample can be tested in 15 minutes. Farmer may wait on results or have results sent by phone or mail. Even though sample can be tested in 15 minutes, time required will depend on when sample arrives in laboratory.

5. The fee is $12 per sample for the testing.

Farm tax break dispute continues

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The president of the Missouri Farm Bureau Federation has disputed claims that a new state law providing a property tax break for farmers is not working.

C.R. Johnston, president of the 60,000 member organization, said in a statement Friday that in counties near metropolitan areas the law has already saved farmers thousands of dollars in property taxes.

Under the 1975 law, farmers can ask to have their land assessed at its use value rather than at its real market value, which would normally be significantly higher.

Earlier this week, the Missouri Association of Counties said its own survey of county assessors showed the law was primarily benefiting corporations and land speculators.

"I am most disappointed in their position," Johnston said,

Holds annual summer picnic

Approximately 160 DHIA members, their families, hired hands and guests met at noon Aug. 15 for a luncheon. The main dish consisted of deep-fried fish and chicken, which was provided by the associations. Wives brought covered dishes with a wide variety of salads, vegetables and desserts.

Carl Todt, Southeast DHIA supervisor, served as chef for the affair. He was assisted in planning and carrying out the arrangements by Ronnie Voshage, John Moore, Gary Dobbelare, Marvin Schoen and Joe Kirchdoerfer.

The DHI Association is a non-profit organization to assist dairy farmers in improving their herds through regular monthly testing and by the use of computerized records.

Dairy farmers in the southeast area interested in learning more about the use of these methods should contact the University of Missouri Extension Center in their county or one of the following supervisors in the area: Carl Todt of Sikeston, Gary Dobbelare of Perryville or Althea Elfrink of Bismarck.

Corn silage time is here

By JOHN D. GARRETT
Area agronomy specialist

BENTON— Most of the early planted corn in Scott County has dented and many farmers will be making silage soon as weather permits. Good corn silage is one of the best and most economical feeds that can be fed to cattle. In order to make No. 1 silage, a few guidelines should be followed.

Corn should be harvested for silage after the ear is well dented, but before the leaves turn brown and dry. At this stage of development, both quality and quantity of silage are at their peak. After the dent stage, feeding value of the stalks and leaves decrease while field losses increase. Ears will usually be well dented somewhere between the 32 and 35 per cent moisture stage.

Corn harvested for silage in the milk or dough stage will yield less feed nutrients per acre than if harvested later. Corn silage which is cut late and has brown, dead leaves and stalks will usually make fair to good quality silage but total production may be sharply reduced.

Most of the corn in the county has not been under any extended moisture stress this year, so excess nitrates should not be a problem. If you feel your corn may have an excess of nitrates, contact the extension office and we can check it for you. Several fields of corn have been checked that were deficient in N because of too much rain. Yield will be reduced on these fields.

Corn silage should be cut into particles one-half to three-fourths inches in length. Particles this size will pack more firmly in the silo and are more palatable to cattle.

If silage is too dry, it may be necessary to add water in order to establish air-tight conditions. As a rule of thumb, add four gallons of water per ton of silagefor each one per cent desired increase in moisture content. Add water as the silo is being filled.

Top quality silage can be made without the addition of any additives or preservatives. The two additives most often used in corn silage are limestoneand a non-protein nitrogen source such as urea. Adding 10 pounds of urea per don of forage being ensiled will not cause feed refusal. Urea added at 10 pounds per ton will increase the protein about 1.3 per cent. Therefore, a silage containing 2 per cent protein would be increased to 3.3 per cent on an as-fed basis.

Addition of 20 pounds of limestone per ton at ensiling will increase acid content of silage. Apparently acides are neutralized and allow the fermentation to continue longer or at a faster rate.

Remember, lethal gases may occur at any time during silo filling. The greatest danger is 12 to 72 hours after filling, but gas may occur up to 10 days after the last silage is put in thesilo. A few simplerules will prevent tragedy and injury.

1. Run the blower 15-20 minutes before going into a partly filled silo. Keep blower funning while anyone is inside.

2. Stay outof the silo for no less than a week or preferably two after the silo is filled.

3. If you experience the slightest throat irritation or coughing, get into fresh air fast. immediate treatment by a doctor is an absolute must.

Remember, silage removes the entire plant so nutrients are not returned to the soil. Potassium is the nutrient removed in greatest quantity, so be sure to soil test or apply adequate potash for following crops.

Disaster relief programs to aid Missouri counties flood victims

By LAURA PATRICK
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — The rainfall had ceased and the flash flood was abated by the time state and federal agencies activated their numerous disaster relief programs to assist southwest Missourians.

Relief efforts at the federal and state levels got into high gear nearly three weeks after the July 4 flash flood, when President Ford designated Jasper, Newton, Barton and Wayne counties as disaster areas.

"We are capable of immediate recovery efforts, but the immediate personal suffering was not that widespread," said Neal Plantz, training officer with the Adjutant General's Disaster Planning and Operations Office.

"Most of the damage was to property and buildings," Plantz said. "It was a matter of getting loans to rebuild or repair."

Most relief measures have been directed toward providing funds for rebuilding or repair of damage done to private and public property. Disaster unemployment assistance and emergency aid to families displaced by the flood has not been greatly needed.

Before the flood abated, representatives from the state disaster planning office and the Federal Disaster Assistance Agency (FDAA) had met with mayors, city councilmen, county court judges and civil defense commissioners in the flood area to make the assessment of damages required for a disaster declaration.

"One-stop relief centers" were organized by the FDAA in Joplin, Neosho and Lamar to encourage early applications for assistance. Applicants were first interviewed by Red Cross volunteers to determine their needs and direct them to the appropriate agency representatives at the center.

The centers were open for only a few days, but applications for most forms of assistance still are being accepted for most relief programs, Plantz said.

The federal Housing and Urban Development (HUD) office has received 70 applications so far for a minimal repair program which provides up to $2,500 for minor home repairs. Temporary housing, rent-free, up to one year, also was available for displaced families. Only two families needed this service, according to the FDAA.

The Central Assemblies of God church in Joplin will receive a direct grant from HUD for repairs to a school it operates. Portions of the school located at the basement level were "wiped out," the Rev. Mack Evans said.

The Rev. Evans estimated damage to the school to be $50,000. HUD will reimburse the school for all damages to facilities used for non-sectarian educational purposes, Henry Molter, FDAA deputy regional director, said.

Public assistance is available for flood damage to all non-profit medical, health or educational institutions, Molter said. Damage to a chapel in a church-administered school or hospital, however, would not be reimbursed by the federal program.

Persons who became unemployed as a direct result of the flood were eligible for disaster unemployment assistance, George Teller, chief of the state's unemployment insurance program in the division of employment, said.

There have been "very few claims, maybe a dozen" for unemployment benefits ranging from $71 to $85 per month, Teller said. "The flood actually created some new temporary jobs in clean up." Many of those who became unemployed were sales clerks who were laid off while stores re-ordered merchandise.

To date, 35 home loans totalling more than $129,000 and four business loans totalling nearly $136,000 have been granted by the federal Small Business Administration. The present interest rate charged is six and five-eighths per cent. Borrowers must demonstrate their ability to repay, but can take up to 30 years to do so.

Farmers Home Administration (FHA) loans provide a similar service for farmers. Six FHA loans at five per cent interest have been issued to farmers in the flood area to date.

"We won't get any more reports until the end of the month," FHA state director John Foster, said. Foster added he does not expect to receive many more applications.

"Almost everyone" who suffered some form of damage due to floods should apply for a "casualty loss" deduction on their federal income tax returns next year, Molter said.

A form designed to report flood damage is available at local Internal Revenue Service (IRS) offices. Any damage exceeding $100 not covered by insurance is deductible from a person's taxable income. Persons whose previous income tax returns were lost or damaged should write for photostatic copies from the IRS regional office in Kansas City.

State agencies cooperate more actively with the federal government in the area of damage to public property. Washed-out roads, highways and bridges account for most of the damage to public facilities although Joplin's sewage and water treatment plant also was severely damaged.

Joplin suffered the most flood damage, approximately $211,000 to its public facilities, Plantz said. Neosho lost an estimated $17,000 in damages to public property. Repair costs from these damages will be reimbursed through state and federal funds.

Area to begin corn harvesting

BENTON - Most of the early planted corn is about mature and harvest will start within the next week or so. The corn crop looks very good. I expect to hear of 150 bushels per acre or more on many farms.

The Southwestern corn borer is present in most fields to some extent. Farmers that applied furadan at planting have less corn down than those that didn't use it. However, the high winds Aug. 13 and 14 blew down a good bit of corn. Stalks were weakened due to stalk rot, corn borer and-or low potash.

Farmers will need to do a good job of harvesting and drying the corn. The ears will be infected with various types of rot when they come in contact with moist soil.

Not much has been heard about aflatoxin lately, but precautions still need to be taken to prevent the fungus in stored corn. Most of the elevators didn't say much about it last year, and from what I can find out, they won't be checking too closely this year.

The aflatoxin fungus starts in the field, but multiplies rapidly in storage if conditions are right. In order to decrease the chance of having aflatoxin in your corn, the following guidelines should be followed:

1. Harvest corn promptly when mature. If drying equipment is available, harvest at 22-25 per cent moisture.

2. Adjust picker cylinder to lowest speed and widest clearance that will give adequate shelling. Less cracking occurs at low cylinder speeds. Cracking and other damage encourage mold growth and attracts insects.

3. Adjust picker for maximum cleaning of moist trash and green matter.

4. Do not hold high moisture corn in wagons, trucks or other similar holding areas longer than six hours. High moisture corn awaiting drying should be placed in a "holding bin" and air forced through it to keep it cool.

5. Corn that collects in auger wells and pits around dump stations frequently contain aflatoxin fungus. This can be a ready source of contamination to corn as it is put into storage. Clean these areas thoroughly before and after harvest.

6. Dry corn to 12 per cent moisture for safe storage within 24 hours after harvest. Do not harvest more than bins are capable of drying in this time period.

7. Corn in bins should be aerated regularly during storage to prevent sweating when outside temperatures drop. Do not operate fans during periods of rainfall or high humidity.

There are four methods being used to detect A. flavus and-or aflatoxin. Only one is commonly used in southeast Missouri. This is the ultra-violet light referred to as the "black light" test. This test is not 100 per cent accurate, but may be better than nothing.

If there is a "flourescence" in grain samples when subjected to the black light, it is assumed that aflatoxin is present. Several other molds also show a flourescence so this test can be completely erroneous.

Another method of detection is the U-V or millicolumn test. This method has been found to be reasonably quick and accurate. The test accurately tells if aflatoxin is present, but does not tell the exact amount.

This test will be available to farmers in southeast Missouri this year. If the Black LIght test is used on your corn and molds are found that show a flourescence, and corn is rejected, I recommend you have the U-V test made. Follow these steps for obtaining a sample and getting it tested:

1. Randomly take a 15-pound sample from the load of corn.

2. Put corn in a clean bag or container.

3. Take sample directly to Plant Health Clinic at the Delta Center in Portageville.

4. Sample can be tested in 15 minutes. Farmer may wait on results or have results sent by phone or mail. Even though sample can be tested in 15 minutes, time required will depend on when sample arrives in laboratory.

5. The fee is $12 per sample for the testing.

Farm tax break dispute continues

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The president of the Missouri Farm Bureau Federation has disputed claims that a new state law providing a property tax break for farmers is not working.

C.R. Johnston, president of the 60,000 member organization, said in a statement Friday that in counties near metropolitan areas the law has already saved farmers thousands of dollars in property taxes.

Under the 1975 law, farmers can ask to have their land assessed at its use value rather than at its real market value, which would normally be significantly higher.

Earlier this week, the Missouri Association of Counties said its own survey of county assessors showed the law was primarily benefiting corporations and land speculators.

"I am most disappointed in their position," Johnston said,

Holds annual summer picnic

Approximately 160 DHIA members, their families, hired hands and guests met at noon Aug. 15 for a luncheon. The main dish consisted of deep-fried fish and chicken, which was provided by the associations. Wives brought covered dishes with a wide variety of salads, vegetables and desserts.

Carl Todt, Southeast DHIA supervisor, served as chef for the affair. He was assisted in planning and carrying out the arrangements by Ronnie Voshage, John Moore, Gary Dobbelare, Marvin Schoen and Joe Kirchdoerfer.

The DHI Association is a non-profit organization to assist dairy farmers in improving their herds through regular monthly testing and by the use of computerized records.

Dairy farmers in the southeast area interested in learning more about the use of these methods should contact the University of Missouri Extension Center in their county or one of the following supervisors in the area: Carl Todt of Sikeston, Gary Dobbelare of Perryville or Althea Elfrink of Bismarck.

Corn silage time is here

By JOHN D. GARRETT
Area agronomy specialist

BENTON— Most of the early planted corn in Scott County has dented and many farmers will be making silage soon as weather permits. Good corn silage is one of the best and most economical feeds that can be fed to cattle. In order to make No. 1 silage, a few guidelines should be followed.

Corn should be harvested for silage after the ear is well dented, but before the leaves turn brown and dry. At this stage of development, both quality and quantity of silage are at their peak. After the dent stage, feeding value of the stalks and leaves decrease while field losses increase. Ears will usually be well dented somewhere between the 32 and 35 per cent moisture stage.

Disaster relief programs to aid Missouri counties flood victims

Since this is an election year, many taxpayers are hoping that taxes and spending will be cut. But the word we get from Washington, D.C., is that the promises to cut spending are bunk, whether Ford makes them or members of Congress.

Federal spending is running at about $375 billions for this fiscal year which in the past two years represents a 40 per cent increase. Now it looks like Ford's new budget will be around $395 billions.

And part of the cover-up of this increased spending will be some howls from Congress over what Ford proposes to curb spending by curtailing certain programs. Also, this budget squabbling with a Democratic Congress will be a principal issue in the campaign which puts Democrats on the defensive, because voters are strongly in favor of both tax cuts and spending cuts.

A disease that affects maple trees is taking the place of Dutch elm disease as the major threat to the nation's residential shade trees.

While some remedies have been found for Dutch elm disease, there is at present no known cure for the widespread maple decline, says University of Michigan tree pathologist Harrison L. Morton.

Maple decline right now is most prevalent in midwestern states but is also appearing in the northeast. The disease, which may take 10 years to kill a tree, is most common among two popular shade varieties, the Norway maple and the sugar maple. In Ann Arbor, as many as 50 per cent of the sugar maples show some indications of decline.

"We don't know what the natue of the disease is," says Morton. "If we did, we would be able to come up with a remedy."

THE ART OF CONVERSATION

Among civilized people, conservation is one of the great pleasures of life. It educates, it entertains, it gives one an opportunity to express and to get "feedback" on his own feelings and views. It is an informal, sometimes even a playful way of sharpening one's wits for the more serious contests of opinion which occur in the formalized arenas of work and politics and social reform — wherever committees exist and groups of people oppose each other.

Havilah Babcock, writing in Field and Stream, comments: "The charm of good conversation lies in its spontaneity and disrespectfulness, the way it rambles without apology from one topic to another. Lay down rules for the conduct of a conversation and you will wind up with a swapping of ignorance and an exercise in mutual boredom. The first requirement is that nobody should know what is coming next."

THE COUNTRY GROUCH GIVES HIS OPINION

Kenneth Althaus, state representative for Atchison county's Forty-Seventh District, recently ran an advertisement in The Globe, asking citizens for their opinion on 10 questions on key issues that he will face in Topeka.

Among the numerous responses he received, Rep. Althaus allowed us to use one that was signed "The Country Grouch" which we reprint below:

1. Should agricultural land be assessed on a use value basis?

If "use value basis" means the price of the crop that has been raised on one field at its peak price, NO. Let farm land alone, the taxes are high enough now.

When Richard Nixon made the remark "The farmers got $15.00 for their beans--that is too high" on nationwide television, not one legislator in the state or national govt. challenged it. Not one person in the Agriculture Dept. from county agents to the Secretary of Agriculture challenged the remark. That year farmers received from $3.00 to $4.00 a bushel for beans and none of the "city folks" had wits enough to know what was going on. Early this year there were several bills mentioned concerning taxes but no explanation to the farmers who will have to pay them.

2. Should motor vehicle personal property taxes be paid at the same time you buy your license tag?

No. Why complicate matters, let them alone.

3. Do you favor capital punishment (death penalty, etc.)?

Yes. And include legislators who want to raise taxes instead of lowering their own salary.

4. Should county officials be elected for four year terms?

No. And tolerate inefficient officials twice as long?

5. Should county officials be appointed by the County Commission instead of being elected?

No.

6. Should public employes be allowed to strike?

No.

7. If taxes had to be raised, in which areas would you prefer to see them raised? Sales Tax? Income Tax? Property Tax?

None. Cut public officials' and labor's wages and keep taxes at the present level or lower taxes.

How come the farmers can take a cut in income but no one else has to?

8. Would you support County Home Rule?

If County Home Rule means what we have now, Yes. If it means a group of counties consolidated or the state consolidated, No. Terms used by politicians can be confusing.

9. Do you believe there is, or will be an energy shortage?

How can there be a shortage of fuel when you ask a filling station attendant to fill the fuel tank only until the pump shuts off and he continues to fill it level full so when a truck or pickup sets on uneven ground the fuel runs out? No doubt the "city folks" didn't know that either.

10. Would you support consolidation of County and City law enforcement?

No. After consolidation of schools we have a drug problem we would never have had in our one-room country schools. Now teachers strike and that puts children on the streets when they should be in school. Do we need more consolidation and problems?

Added comment: I think the legislature should meet once every two years. Maybe they would settle down to business instead of offering such wild ideas. It sounds like a person having hallucinations when coming off drugs.

PRICE RISE

The amount of money you really pay to support government is difficult to determine. You pay taxes every time you turn around, and it's hard to figure out just how much you end up paying. But one thing is certain--all the money government spends comes out of your pockets.

So, perhaps the best way to determine how much tax you pay is to take the total expense of government and divide it by the number of people who have to pay. In 1935, for example, total government (local, state and federal) spending came to $13.4 billion. At that time, the labor force of the country numbered approximately 77 million persons. The average working person at that time had to contribute just $104.64 to pay for all government services for a full year.

Forty years later, 1975, the total cost of government has skyrocketed to about $525 billion--forty times as much (not adjusting for inflation). Meanwhile, the work force only doubled to about 150 million. Each working person's share today is $3,500--thirty times as much as in 1935.

However, while costing more and more to support each year, government has also decreased the value of the currency. Each dollar in 1975 is worth only about one third of a 1935 dollar. So that means if you pay $3,500 to support government in 1975, you are only paying about $1,165 in 1935 terms. With this adjustment, the cost of government can be said to have increased ten times rather than thirty times. Small comfort.

By way of comparison, a one-pound loaf of bread (similarly adjusted for inflation) costs less than twice as much today as in 1935. A quart of milk cost about twice as much. A new car can be purchased today for just slightly more than the adjusted 1935 selling price.

As Will Rogers once put it: "Lord, the money we spend on government. And it's not a bit better than the government we had 20 years ago for half the money."

Advertising as liberty's vestige

Does advertising contribute anything to the world? Is mankind served by efforts to show that this brand of miracle suds gets clothes whiter than those miracle suds? Couldn't the $28 billion spent in America every year on advertising be better used elsewhere, say in improving the nation's schools?

Such questions have been asked not only by critics of this country's economic system but by conscientious advertising people themselves, and certainly by everyone who has ever been irritated by an interruption to a television program for some inane commercial "message". One leading member of the advertising profession has met the questions head-on.

Rather than being an expensive parasite on the social structure, "advertising is as vital to the preservation of freedom in my country as the free exercise of publishing a newspaper or the free exercise of building a church or the free exercise of the right of trial by jury," asserts Tom Dillon, chairman of the board of Batten, Barton, Durstine ' Osborn, Inc.

For one thing, he points out in an address reprinted in the BBDO Newsletter, the ad agency's house organ, part of that $28 billion allegedly wasted on local and national advertising pays the entire cost of running all the radio and television networks in the United States and all the 7,526 individual radio and TV stations. Another part of it provides the bulk of the support of 1,819 daily and 8,824 weekly newspapers and 9,872 consumer, trade and technical magazines.

Without the financial support of advertising, says Dillon, not only would there be no practical freedom of economic choice, there are very serious questions whether there would be any practical freedom in politics and religion.

"What good is freedom of the press unless you have a press and the paper to put in it, and a way of distributing the paper?" he asks. "You may have freedom of speech, even, but if you do not have access to a press or to a radio station or to a television station, of what value is this freedom?"

It is no coincidence, he suggests, that advertising is most highly developed in countries which have developed the highest social and economic values. Conversely, freedom is most retricted in those countries where advertising is forbidden by law or controlled to render it ineffective..

"Tyranny," says Dillon, "hates advertising like the devil hates holy water."

It is also no coincidence, he adds, that the first published version of the Declaration of Independence, in the Pennsylvania Evening Post, was followed by 10 advertisements.

If advertising is wasteful, inefficient and often guilty of excesses, sois our system of government and our method of choosing that government, so is our legal system and so are the news media. But freedom from tyranny means the freedom to make mistakes as well as the freedom to be right. "To exercise true freedom of choice, "says Dillon, "you've got to know what you've got a choice of. That is the function of advertising. We do not have a free choice of religion unless there are people preacing religious values. We do not have a free choice of election unless there are speakers for a variety of candidates. We don't have free economic choice unless there is some way in which our alternatives can be brought forcibly to our attention.

"What the orators and preachers are to politics and religion, advertising is to economics. Advertising presents in the best possible way the best possible case for an economic decision to buy certain products and services. Is this an economic and social waste?"

To paraphrase Winston Chuchill's judgment on Democracy: It would seem that advertising is the worst way to guarantee individual fredom of choice-except for any other way we can think of.

SILENT COVE

SILENT COVE-- One of the reasons people buy summer houses is to invite friends out to see how they have escaped the hustle and bustle of the city.

The Briarpatches have been trying to get us to visit them at their home in Silent Cove for months and we finally went up there last weekend.

Charles Briarpatch met us at the airport. "You're going to love Silent Cove," he assured us. "It's so beautiful and quiet you can't believe it."

Our bedroom was next to the bathroom which was very convenient because everyone used it and we got to meet all the friends of the Briarpatch children.

The first morning I woke up to hear someone pounding with a hammer.

My wife said, "What's that?"

I looked out the window and I saw three workmen building a new house.

At breakfast Charles explained that Silent Cove had been discovered a few years ago by a developer and they were building houses all over the place.

"We're going on a picnic today," Nancy Briarpatch said. "They have some lovely woods around here and it makes you wonder why anyone would live in a city."

We drove a few miles and then hiked a few miles and finally found ourselves in a beautiful glen overlooking Silent Cove. We spread out our blankets and started passing around daiquiris.

"Isn't this the life?" Charles said.

Suddenly I heard a buzz saw behind me.

Two men were cutting up a tree and the buzz saw was screaming in anger at the reluctant wood.

"What are you doing?" I shouted at one of the men.

"Got to clear out all the trees that fell down in the storm," he shouted back. "It's going to take us two months to do it."

We ate our picnic lunch to the accompaniment of the Buzz Saw symphony in C Sharp Major.

"Why can't you play?" I asked.

"I have to cut the lawn," he said. "You go ahead and have a game without me."

While we were hitting the ball back and forth, Charles brought out his motorized Toro lawn mower, without a muffler, and started to cut the grass. Most of the lawn was located around the tennis court so we all tried to keep time to Charles' mowing while we concentrated on the game.

In the evening we sat out on the porch to watch the sunset when we heard the sound of an engine being revved up.

"Someone else cutting his lawn?" I inquired.

"No, that's a 10-year-old kid next door. His parents gave him a motorbike and he loves to use the throttle on it at this time of night," Nancy Briarpatch said. "He sits on it for hours pretending he's a motorcycle policeman."

About 10 o'clock we were about to go to bed only to be assaulted by sounds of rock music coming up from the beach.

"Somebody having a party?" I asked Charles.

"No," he told me. "They have a discotheque down at the beach and it's so quiet around here the sound travels for miles. You can hear the music every night."

The next morning we went sailing out in the cove. Unfortunately, everyone else in the cove was water-skiing and the roar of the motorboats drowned out all conversation.

Except for a seaplane that landed that night, a bulldozer that was clearing a lot next door for a new summer house and a motorcycle gang that camped up the hill, Silent Cove was everything the Briarpatches said it would be.

When we got back to Washington, my wife and I had a difficult job adjusting to the city. The damn birds outside our window started chirping at 8 o'clock in the morning.

Closed Shop Muscle: British Journalists' Union launches drive for control of Nation's Free Press

LONDON— If sometime next summer the astral remains of William Shakespeare suddenly materialize on Fleet Street and he were to go peddling the inside story of Hamlet and Ophelia or the balcony's eye view of Romeo and Juliet to the great dailies of this overheated city, he might well be turned away because he's not a member of the National Union of Journalists (NUJ).

Quietly, perhaps because water now is a greater problem than whisky, the newspaper union appears to be winning its fight for a national closed shop, which would force editors and independent feature writers in the NUJ. Or which could keep them out of it, depending on the political or "industrial" whims of the union's militant leaders.

Without much publicity there now is being drawn up a "grand charter" for supposed freedom of the press here -- which isn't guaranteed because there is no written constitution. Just a "hit-and-miss" common law.

Since March, under the Trade Union and Labor Relations Act (of 1974-75) all British industry--including the press--is open to closed shop agreements. If a union-- including the newspeople's NUJ--has the "industrial" power, it could force all employes of a publication to join. Editors included. And the NUJ could demand--and probably would--the ouster of the 2,500 members of an older, more conservative union called the Institute of Journalists.

It should be known that the NUJ, growing ever tougher, has in it intellects of many kinds -- Maoists, Trotskyites, left-wing laboriets known as the "Tribune" advocates, as well as traditional socialist and conservatives. Point is, as I found the other day in the new labor movement of the new nation of Portugal, the leftwingers come early to union meetings, stay late, pass radical resolutions, while the ordinary Joe goes home to his family or to his pub.

And now many of the powerful NUJ militants are pushing for job action to win closed shop agreements. NUJ officials will tell you they won't insist that the editors do more than pay their "subscription," meaning "dues." But who will guarantee that? The law is too complex.

Actually a 1975 amendment to Britain's Labor Relations Act doesn't protect any newsperson or editor from arbitrary or unreasonable expulsion from the NUJ, or any union member in any industry.

Thus if the true freedom of the press advocates lose their fight against imposition of the closed shop in the next six or eight months in the council rooms, where the new press charter is being debated, it is possible -- even probable -- that there will be a war to the death of many newspapers for control of journalism and for freedom of expression.

The articulate NUJ leaders say they never would push for such editorial control. But up in Northamptonshire, through which I passed the other day, the newspaper union authorized strike action against the Evening Telegraph and two other papers in the area -- in support o the chapel's (union) demand for a closed shop.

Actually, it's all the work of Michael Foot, a veteran 63-year-old Socialist, who isn't doing badly for an iconoclast who wore a truck driver's jacket to Buckingham Palace to meet the queen when he was appointed to the cabinet by former Prime Minister Harold Wilson. The erudite, old-fashioned Mike Foot now is the lord president of the council and leader o the House of Commons. He represents a safe Welsh socialistt district just outside of Cardiff.

In one confidential quasi-government memorandum he is accused, after he pushed the Trade Union Act through Parliament, of being "willing to accept rather less liberty of the press in return for greater freedom in collective bargaining" for the powerful 10.5-million member Trades Union Congress (British counterpart of the AFL-CIO).

If the NUJ is victorious at the end of the year-long struggle over a new press charter, it would be possible to force an editor to join the union. Suppose then the NUJ executive council took a positio non America and North Korea, or on apartheid and South Africa or on the UN resolutions on Israel. And if the editor wrote contrarily to the union's philosophy, the NUJ council could oust him from the union and theoretically from his job.

Wouldn't this give the journalists editorial power over a newspaper? Already, some NUJ factions are demanding union representation on editorial policy boards.

There would be no way to prevent the union from being the prevent the union from bein the arbiter on who would be hired or which independent, free lance writers could be commissioned for special pieces.

The Trade Union law is complicated. And there are many theories on what constitutes press freedom here. But I don't doubt that once the journalists' unions won closed shop agreements, the NUJ would use its muscle.

There's another development. The Trades Union Congress now plans to push for creation of a nationalized, computerized government operated printing press (or network of such plants) -- just as the "federal" government boards run the mines, the railroads, the steel industry, etc.

If this new objective can be won, then the labor movement would simply rent "time" on the presses, just as one buys time from a computer leasing firm. Thus the Labor Party or the TUC could have daily newspapers or magazines without any financial investment.

Well, they might find a place in all this for William Shakespeare or Winston Churchill. They do tell me they're not inflexible on a closed shop.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Fed Aid Sought by Mississippi As S-LA Borders on Collapse

by Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- Congressmen who vote against programs for the poor, invariably, seem to be the same ones who support benefits for business.

They are usually the first, for example, to demand that the taxpayers bail out faltering corporations. No small companies, mind you. Congress seldom rushes to the rescue of small mismanaged companies. These are allowed to sink into bankruptcy as casualties of the free enterprise system.

The corporations must be giants, their mismanagement massive, before Congress will intervene. Food stamps may be cut back for the poor, but millions are available for Penn Central Railroad and Lockheed Aircraft.

Mississippi's 30-man congressional delegation, for example, has been outspoken against government spending to help the poor. But the Mississippi congressmen have been maneuvering behind the scenes to save the state's huge Bankers Trust Savings and Loan empire from financial collapse.

The Mississippi delegation has brought pressure on the Treasury Department and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to aid the failing financial empire. This could cost the taxpayers as much as $100 million, which would buy a lot of food stamps for the hungry.

The congressmen from Mississippi have been huddling privately with Treasury officials to seek federal funds to bail out Bankers Trust. At these closed-door meetings, two of the most persuasive pleaders have been Rep. G. V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D.-Miss., and Rep. Trent Lott, R.-Miss., who happen to have a personal stake in the outcome.

Montgomery owns 2,760 shares in Bankers Trust and has $7,937 on deposit. Lott owns 500 shares and has $4,000 in savings. A third member of the delegation, Rep. Thad Cochran, R.-Miss., owns 300 shares and has about $6,500 in savings. Other prominent politicians are reported to have far greater holdings in the faltering company.

Bankers Trust is Mississippi's largest state-chartered, privately insured saving and loan association. It began to flounder earlier this year. There were charges of gross mismanagement.

Not only politicos and fat cats have money in Bankers Trust. Some 60,000 ordinary Mississippians, including many elderly, stand to lose millions.

Because the savings and loan combine isn't federally insured, the depositors must depend on the private insurance company which insured Bankers Trust.

But unfortunately, the insurance company is largely owned by Bankers Trust and, therefore, is mired in the same financial bog.

The insurance company also insured other savings and loan associations. This precipitated panic withdrawals, which force a rare moratorium on withdrawals.

At this point, the political pressure began. Appeals have been made to Commerce Secretary Elliot Richardson, Treasury Secretary William Simon and the White House itself.

The entire Mississippi congressional delegation, led by the venerable Sen. John Stennis, D.-Miss., called on Simon. Montgomery and Lott made the strongest pitch for federal aid.

Meanwhile, Garth Marston, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, flew to Mississippi. After his return, he confided that he hoped to "expedite the timely processing of applications for insurance" from Mississippi's savings and loan association.

This means that the taxpayers, in effect, will co-sign the insurance that the failing Bankers Trust will soon attempt to collect.

Meanwhile, neither the federal nor state governments are trying to find out what caused the financial fiasco. The state legislature enacted a conservatorship for Bankers Trust but specifically voted down a detailed inquiry.

Footnote: Federal officials have confirmed that they have been besieged by Mississippi politicians about the financial debacle but have denied the proposed federal aid is a political bail-out.

It should be noted that Mississippi's Bankers Trust is unrelated to the better-known Bankers Trust in New York City.

WATCH ON WASTE: The federal government's curiosity is insatiable. Forms are constantly going out from Washington demanding answers to endless questions.

The Health, Education and Welfare Department, for example, requires every college and university to fill out several annual reports. One of the questionnaires, a 50-page document entitled "Degrees and other Formal Awards Conferred," was dispatched this year to every one of the nation's 3,055 institutions of higher learning.

But unfortunately, 37 of the 50 pages didn't apply to the 1,141 community colleges, which got the full, fat forms anyhow. These colleges, of course, returned the 37 pages absolutely blank. Since the forms came in triplicate, this amounted to about 120,000 pages of blank paper.

Footnote: An HEW spokesman insisted it was cheaper to send a single report to every institution than to prepare separate reports.

Since this is an election year, many taxpayers are hoping that taxes and spending will be cut. But the word we get from Washington, D.C., is that the promises to cut spending are bunk, whether Ford makes them or members of Congress.

Federal spending is running at about $375 billions for this fiscal year which in the past two years represents a 40 per cent increase. Now it looks like Ford's new budget will be around $395 billions.

And part of the cover-up of this increased spending will be some howls from Congress over what Ford proposes to curb spending by curtailing certain programs. Also, this budget squabbling with a Democratic Congress will be a principal issue in the campaign which puts Democrats on the defensive, because voters are strongly in favor of both tax cuts and spending cuts.

A disease that affects maple trees is taking the place of Dutch elm disease as the major threat to the nation's residential shade trees.

While some remedies have been found for Dutch elm disease, there is at present no known cure for the widespread maple decline, says University of Michigan tree pathologist Harrison L. Morton.

Maple decline right now is most prevalent in midwestern states but is also appearing in the northeast. The disease, which may take 10 years to kill a tree, is most common among two popular shade varieties, the Norway maple and the sugar maple. In Ann Arbor, as many as 50 per cent of the sugar maples show some indications of decline.

"We don't know what the natue of the disease is," says Morton. "If we did, we would be able to come up with a remedy."

THE ART OF CONVERSATION

Among civilized people, conservation is one of the great pleasures of life. It educates, it entertains, it gives one an opportunity to express and to get "feedback" on his own feelings and views. It is an informal, sometimes even a playful way of sharpening one's wits for the more serious contests of opinion which occur in the formalized arenas of work and politics and social reform — wherever committees exist and groups of people oppose each other.

Havilah Babcock, writing in Field and Stream, comments: "The charm of good conversation lies in its spontaneity and disrespectfulness, the way it rambles without apology from one topic to another. Lay down rules for the conduct of a conversation and you will wind up with a swapping of ignorance and an exercise in mutual boredom. The first requirement is that nobody should know what is coming next."

THE COUNTRY GROUCH GIVES HIS OPINION

Kenneth Althaus, state representative for Atchison county's Forty-Seventh District, recently ran an advertisement in The Globe, asking citizens for their opinion on 10 questions on key issues that he will face in Topeka.

Among the numerous responses he received, Rep. Althaus allowed us to use one that was signed "The Country Grouch" which we reprint below:

1. Should agricultural land be assessed on a use value basis?

If "use value basis" means the price of the crop that has been raised on one field at its peak price, NO. Let farm land alone, the taxes are high enough now.

When Richard Nixon made the remark "The farmers got $15.00 for their beans--that is too high" on nationwide television, not one legislator in the state or national govt. challenged it. Not one person in the Agriculture Dept. from county agents to the Secretary of Agriculture challenged the remark. That year farmers received from $3.00 to $4.00 a bushel for beans and none of the "city folks" had wits enough to know what was going on. Early this year there were several bills mentioned concerning taxes but no explanation to the farmers who will have to pay them.

2. Should motor vehicle personal property taxes be paid at the same time you buy your license tag?

No. Why complicate matters, let them alone.

3. Do you favor capital punishment (death penalty, etc.)?

Yes. And include legislators who want to raise taxes instead of lowering their own salary.

4. Should county officials be elected for four year terms?

No. And tolerate inefficient officials twice as long?

5. Should county officials be appointed by the County Commission instead of being elected?

No.

6. Should public employes be allowed to strike?

No.

7. If taxes had to be raised, in which areas would you prefer to see them raised? Sales Tax? Income Tax? Property Tax?

None. Cut public officials' and labor's wages and keep taxes at the present level or lower taxes.

How come the farmers can take a cut in income but no one else has to?

8. Would you support County Home Rule?

If County Home Rule means what we have now, Yes. If it means a group of counties consolidated or the state consolidated, No. Terms used by politicians can be confusing.

9. Do you believe there is, or will be an energy shortage?

How can there be a shortage of fuel when you ask a filling station attendant to fill the fuel tank only until the pump shuts off and he continues to fill it level full so when a truck or pickup sets on uneven ground the fuel runs out? No doubt the "city folks" didn't know that either.

10. Would you support consolidation of County and City law enforcement?

No. After consolidation of schools we have a drug problem we would never have had in our one-room country schools. Now teachers strike and that puts children on the streets when they should be in school. Do we need more consolidation and problems?

Added comment: I think the legislature should meet once every two years. Maybe they would settle down to business instead of offering such wild ideas. It sounds like a person having hallucinations when coming off drugs.

PRICE RISE

The amount of money you really pay to support government is difficult to determine. You pay taxes every time you turn around, and it's hard to figure out just how much you end up paying. But one thing is certain--all the money government spends comes out of your pockets.

So, perhaps the best way to determine how much tax you pay is to take the total expense of government and divide it by the number of people who have to pay. In 1935, for example, total government (local, state and federal) spending came to $13.4 billion. At that time, the labor force of the country numbered approximately 77 million persons. The average working person at that time had to contribute just $104.64 to pay for all government services for a full year.

Forty years later, 1975, the total cost of government has skyrocketed to about $525 billion--forty times as much (not adjusting for inflation). Meanwhile, the work force only doubled to about 150 million. Each working person's share today is $3,500--thirty times as much as in 1935.

However, while costing more and more to support each year, government has also decreased the value of the currency. Each dollar in 1975 is worth only about one third of a 1935 dollar. So that means if you pay $3,500 to support government in 1975, you are only paying about $1,165 in 1935 terms. With this adjustment, the cost of government can be said to have increased ten times rather than thirty times. Small comfort.

By way of comparison, a one-pound loaf of bread (similarly adjusted for inflation) costs less than twice as much today as in 1935. A quart of milk cost about twice as much. A new car can be purchased today for just slightly more than the adjusted 1935 selling price.

As Will Rogers once put it: "Lord, the money we spend on government. And it's not a bit better than the government we had 20 years ago for half the money."

Advertising as liberty's vestige

Does advertising contribute anything to the world? Is mankind served by efforts to show that this brand of miracle suds gets clothes whiter than those miracle suds?Couldn't the $28 billion spent in America every year on advertising be better used elsewhere, say in improving the nation's schools?

Such questions have been asked not only by critics of this country's economic system but by conscientious advertising people themselves, and certainly by everyone who has ever been irritated by an interruption to a television program for some inane commercial "message". One leading member of the advertising profession has met the questions head-on.

Rather than being an expensive parasite on the social structure, "advertising is as vital to the preservation of freedom in my country as the free exercise of publishing a newspaper or the free exercise of building a church or the free exercise of the right of trial by jury," asserts Tom Dillon, chairman of the board of Batten, Barton, Durstine ' Osborn, Inc.

For one thing, he points out in an address reprinted in the BBDO Newsletter, the ad agency's house organ, part of that $28 billion allegedly wasted on local and national advertising pays the entire cost of running all the radio and television networks in the United States and all the 7,526 individual radio and TV stations. Another part of it provides the bulk of the support of 1,819 daily and 8,824 weekly newspapers and 9,872 consumer, trade and technical magazines.

Without the financial support of advertising, says Dillon, not only would there be no practical freedom of economic choice, there are very serious questions whether there would be any practical freedom in politics and religion.

"What good is freedom of the press unless you have a press and the paper to put in it, and a way of distributing the paper?" he asks. "You may have freedom of speech, even, but if you do not have access to a press or to a radio station or to a television station, of what value is this freedom?"

It is no coincidence, he suggests, that advertising is most highly developed in countries which have developed the highest social and economic values. Conversely, freedom is most retricted in those countries where advertising is forbidden by law or controlled to render it ineffective..

It is also no coincidence, he adds, that the first published version of the Declaration of Independence, in the Pennsylvania Evening Post, was followed by 10 advertisements.

If advertising is wasteful, inefficient and often guilty of excesses, sois our system of government and our method of choosing that government, so is our legal system and so are the news media. But freedom from tyranny means the freedom to make mistakes as well as the freedom to be right. "To exercise true freedom of choice, "says Dillon, "you've got to know what you've got a choice of. That is the function of advertising. We do not have a free choice of religion unless there are people preacing religious values. We do not have a free choice of election unless there are speakers for a variety of candidates. We don't have free economic choice unless there is some way in which our alternatives can be brought forcibly to our attention.

"What the orators and preachers are to politics and religion, advertising is to economics. Advertising presents in the best possible way the best possible case for an economic decision to buy certain products and services. Is this an economic and social waste?"

To paraphrase Winston Chuchill's judgment on Democracy: It would seem that advertising is the worst way to guarantee individual fredom of choice-except for any other way we can think of.

Closed Shop Muscle:
British Journalists' Union launches drive for control of Nation's Free Press

LONDON— If sometime next summer the astral remains of William Shakespeare suddenly materialize on Fleet Street and he were to go peddling the inside story of Hamlet and Ophelia or the balcony's eye view of Romeo and Juliet to the great dailies of this overheated city, he might well be turned away because he's not a member of the National Union of Journalists (NUJ).

Quietly, perhaps because water now is a greater problem than whisky, the newspaper union appears to be winning its fight for a national closed shop, which would force editors and independent feature writers in the NUJ. Or which could keep them out of it, depending on the political or "industrial" whims of the union's militant leaders.

Without much publicity there now is being drawn up a "grand charter" for supposed freedom of the press here -- which isn't guaranteed because there is no written constitution. Just a "hit-and-miss" common law.

Since March, under the Trade Union and Labor Relations Act (of 1974-75) all British industry--including the press--is open to closed shop agreements. If a union-- including the newspeople's NUJ--has the "industrial" power, it could force all employes of a publication to join. Editors included. And the NUJ could demand--and probably would--the ouster of the 2,500 members of an older, more conservative union called the Institute of Journalists.

It should be known that the NUJ, growing ever tougher, has in it intellects of many kinds -- Maoists, Trotskyites, left-wing laboriets known as the "Tribune" advocates, as well as traditional socialist and conservatives. Point is, as I found the other day in the new labor movement of the new nation of Portugal, the leftwingers come early to union meetings, stay late, pass radical resolutions, while the ordinary Joe goes home to his family or to his pub.

And now many of the powerful NUJ militants are pushing for job action to win closed shop agreements. NUJ officials will tell you they won't insist that the editors do more than pay their "subscription," meaning "dues." But who will guarantee that? The law is too complex.

Actually a 1975 amendment to Britain's Labor Relations Act doesn't protect any newsperson or editor from arbitrary or unreasonable expulsion from the NUJ, or any union member in any industry.

Thus if the true freedom of the press advocates lose their fight against imposition of the closed shop in the next six or eight months in the council rooms, where the new press charter is being debated, it is possible -- even probable -- that there will be a war to the death of many newspapers for control of journalism and for freedom of expression.

The articulate NUJ leaders say they never would push for such editorial control. But up in Northamptonshire, through which I passed the other day, the newspaper union authorized strike action against the Evening Telegraph and two other papers in the area -- in support o the chapel's (union) demand for a closed shop.

Actually, it's all the work of Michael Foot, a veteran 63-year-old Socialist, who isn't doing badly for an iconoclast who wore a truck driver's jacket to Buckingham Palace to meet the queen when he was appointed to the cabinet by former Prime Minister Harold Wilson. The erudite, old-fashioned Mike Foot now is the lord president of the council and leader o the House of Commons. He represents a safe Welsh socialistt district just outside of Cardiff.

In one confidential quasi-government memorandum he is accused, after he pushed the Trade Union Act through Parliament, of being "willing to accept rather less liberty of the press in return for greater freedom in collective bargaining" for the powerful 10.5-million member Trades Union Congress (British counterpart of the AFL-CIO).

If the NUJ is victorious at the end of the year-long struggle over a new press charter, it would be possible to force an editor to join the union. Suppose then the NUJ executive council took a positio non America and North Korea, or on apartheid and South Africa or on the UN resolutions on Israel. And if the editor wrote contrarily to the union's philosophy, the NUJ council could oust him from the union and theoretically from his job.

Wouldn't this give the journalists editorial power over a newspaper? Already, some NUJ factions are demanding union representation on editorial policy boards.

There would be no way to prevent the union from being the prevent the union from bein the arbiter on who would be hired or which independent, free lance writers could be commissioned for special pieces.

The Trade Union law is complicated. And there are many theories on what constitutes press freedom here. But I don't doubt that once the journalists' unions won closed shop agreements, the NUJ would use its muscle.

There's another development. The Trades Union Congress now plans to push for creation of a nationalized, computerized government operated printing press (or network of such plants) -- just as the "federal" government boards run the mines, the railroads, the steel industry, etc.

If this new objective can be won, then the labor movement would simply rent "time" on the presses, just as one buys time from a computer leasing firm. Thus the Labor Party or the TUC could have daily newspapers or magazines without any financial investment.

Well, they might find a place in all this for William Shakespeare or Winston Churchill. They do tell me they're not inflexible on a closed shop.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Fed Aid Sought by Mississippi As S-LA Borders on Collapse

by Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- Congressmen who vote against programs for the poor, invariably, seem to be the same ones who support benefits for business.

They are usually the first, for example, to demand that the taxpayers bail out faltering corporations. No small companies, mind you. Congress seldom rushes to the rescue of small mismanaged companies. These are allowed to sink into bankruptcy as casualties of the free enterprise system.

The corporations must be giants, their mismanagement massive, before Congress will intervene. Food stamps may be cut back for the poor, but millions are available for Penn Central Railroad and Lockheed Aircraft.

Mississippi's 30-man congressional delegation, for example, has been outspoken against government spending to help the poor. But the Mississippi congressmen have been maneuvering behind the scenes to save the state's huge Bankers Trust Savings and Loan empire from financial collapse.

The Mississippi delegation has brought pressure on the Treasury Department and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to aid the failing financial empire. This could cost the taxpayers as much as $100 million, which would buy a lot of food stamps for the hungry.

The congressmen from Mississippi have been huddling privately with Treasury officials to seek federal funds to bail out Bankers Trust. At these closed-door meetings, two of the most persuasive pleaders have been Rep. G. V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D.-Miss., and Rep. Trent Lott, R.-Miss., who happen to have a personal stake in the outcome.

Montgomery owns 2,760 shares in Bankers Trust and has $7,937 on deposit. Lott owns 500 shares and has $4,000 in savings. A third member of the delegation, Rep. Thad Cochran, R.-Miss., owns 300 shares and has about $6,500 in savings. Other prominent politicians are reported to have far greater holdings in the faltering company.

Bankers Trust is Mississippi's largest state-chartered, privately insured saving and loan association. It began to flounder earlier this year. There were charges of gross mismanagement.

Not only politicos and fat cats have money in Bankers Trust. Some 60,000 ordinary Mississippians, including many elderly, stand to lose millions.

Because the savings and loan combine isn't federally insured, the depositors must depend on the private insurance company which insured Bankers Trust.

But unfortunately, the insurance company is largely owned by Bankers Trust and, therefore, is mired in the same financial bog.

The insurance company also insured other savings and loan associations. This precipitated panic withdrawals, which force a rare moratorium on withdrawals.

At this point, the political pressure began. Appeals have been made to Commerce Secretary Elliot Richardson, Treasury Secretary William Simon and the White House itself.

The entire Mississippi congressional delegation, led by the venerable Sen. John Stennis, D.-Miss., called on Simon. Montgomery and Lott made the strongest pitch for federal aid.

Meanwhile, Garth Marston, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, flew to Mississippi. After his return, he confided that he hoped to "expedite the timely processing of applications for insurance" from Mississippi's savings and loan association.

This means that the taxpayers, in effect, will co-sign the insurance that the failing Bankers Trust will soon attempt to collect.

Meanwhile, neither the federal nor state governments are trying to find out what caused the financial fiasco. The state legislature enacted a conservatorship for Bankers Trust but specifically voted down a detailed inquiry.

Footnote: Federal officials have confirmed that they have been besieged by Mississippi politicians about the financial debacle but have denied the proposed federal aid is a political bail-out.

It should be noted that Mississippi's Bankers Trust is unrelated to the better-known Bankers Trust in New York City.

WATCH ON WASTE: The federal government's curiosity is insatiable. Forms are constantly going out from Washington demanding answers to endless questions.

The Health, Education and Welfare Department, for example, requires every college and university to fill out several annual reports. One of the questionnaires, a 50-page document entitled "Degrees and other Formal Awards Conferred," was dispatched this year to every one of the nation's 3,055 institutions of higher learning.

But unfortunately, 37 of the 50 pages didn't apply to the 1,141 community colleges, which got the full, fat forms anyhow. These colleges, of course, returned the 37 pages absolutely blank. Since the forms came in triplicate, this amounted to about 120,000 pages of blank paper.

Footnote: An HEW spokesman insisted it was cheaper to send a single report to every institution than to prepare separate reports.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Aug. 29th, the 242nd day of 1976. There are 124 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1782, nearly 1,100 persons drowned when an English man-o-war sank while being repaired in the harbor at Portsmouth, England.

On this date:

In 1533, the last Incan king of Peru, Atahualpa, was strangled on the orders of the Spanish conqueror, Francisco Pizarro.

In 1817, the first abolition newspaper in the United States, the Philanthropist, was published in Mount Pleasant, Ohio.

In 1935, Queen Astrid of Belgium was killed in an auto accident in Switzerland.

In 1943, Danish warships were scuttled at Copenhagen in an uprising against the Nazis during World War II.

In 1945, Gen. Douglas MacArthur left Manila for Japan to accept the Japanese surrender.

Ten years ago: A huge selling wave forced prices on the New York Stock Market to new lows.

Five years ago: Enemy forces launched more than 50 attacks and terrorized a dozen polling places in their biggest countrywide show of strength in Vietnam in four months.

Today's birthdays: Gen. Lyman Lemnitzer is 77 years old. Actor Barry Sullivan is 64.

Thought for today: There are not enough jails, not enough policemen, not enough courts to enforce a law not supported by the people — Senator Hubert Humphrey.

Area flood control, drainage projects receive monies

By BILL D. BURLISON
10th District representative

WASHINGTON — Congress has just completed action on the Public Works Appropriations Bill for Fiscal Year 1977 and the President has signed the measure into law (PL 94-355). Numerous 10th District Corps of Engineers projects are included in the measure.

The Corps of Engineers is the President's arm in the area of Public Works. The Corps makes recommendations to the President and he, through his Office of Management and Budget, makes a final determination as to the funding to be included in the President's budget which is submitted to the Congress each January.

If the President does not recommend funds in his budget, the only way they can be obtained is by Congress, acting through its Committee on Appropriations, adding on these funds.

Little had been done until recent years to confront the critical drainage and flood control problems in the 10th District. Upon being named to the Committee on Appropriations, I immediately made this work of utmost priority. During the past few years flood control and drainage projects have been approved and added to the budget.

It was encouraging in pursuing the President's budget this year to see that funds to continue some of these programs were budgeted by the President. Others were added by me. A brief summary of projects is given below.

A considerable portion of Cape Girardeau County has been plagued for years by flooding. My recommendation of $200,000 to begin study of this situation was implemented during fiscal year 1975. Another $130,000 was approved in 1976, and $100,000 for general investigations is contained in the new bill (this is the Cape LaCroix or Cape-Jackson project).

For communities along the Mississippi River faced with flooding when the river rises, we have included monies in the following amounts.

Ste. Genevieve will receive $50,000 for continuation of its feasibility study previously funded in the amount of $120,000.

The Plattin Creek project, in Jefferson County, has received $100,000 during the past two years and will receive $50,000 for continuation of investigative studies in FY 1977.

Pine Ford Lake, a part of the Meramec Basin projects, received $650,000 in fiscal year 1976 and will receive $500,000 in fiscal year 1977 for planning.

The St. Louis Metropolitan area study for Missouri and Illinois will contain considerable work in the Arnold area in Jefferson County. The project received $470,000 in fiscal year 1976, and $165,000 for FY 1977 is in the bill for continuation of general investigations.

The St. Francis Basin drainage project encompasses work in Missouri and Arkansas. There is a constant and growing need for work on the drainage projects included in this area. Funds have been utilized in greater amounts the past few years. Work programmed to be done in fiscal year 1977 is in the following amounts for the enumerated projects:

ST. FRANCIS BASIN
8 County Bridges, Ditch 19, Item 1	$520,000	Dunklin
MO Hwy. "WW" Bridge Wappapello-Crowley's Ridge, Item 2	160,000	Stoddard
Land Acquisition Right-of-way for Castor River	400,000	Stoddard
Right-of-way for Ditch 19, Item 2	300,000	Dunklin
Right-of-way for Belle Fountain and Ditch No. 9	370,000	Pemiscot
Ditch 81 Extension Item 2, Part 2	500,000	(work done in Arkansas, but vital to SeMo
St. Francis River Basin Below Wappapello, Mo., & Ark. (Seepage Study)	145,000	Wayne and Butler
WAPPAPELLO LAKE
Funds for Operation and Maintenance	472,000	Wayne and Butler
Recreation Facilities (Code 710)	100,000	Wayne and Butler
MISSISSIPPI RIVER LEVEES
Bayouville, Mo. Parcel 1	350,000	New Madrid
Parcel 2	468,900	New Madrid and Mississippi
Above Dorena, Mo. Parcel 1	60,000	Mississippi
Parcel 2	285,000	Mississippi

Because of the critical need for work on Ditch 19 on the St. Francis Basin, I requested a line-item for an additional amount of $75,000 for which the Corps of Engineers had capability. This add-on item is contained in the approved bill.

Two additional items not included in the President's Budget within the 10th District which I strongly recommended for funding this year were approved in the proposal, i.e., Drinkwater Sewer and Caruthersville Port Authority.

The residents of Mississippi County have experienced severe flooding in past years. A pumping station at Drinkwater Sewer by means of which impounded runoff and seepage could be pumped over the Mississippi River Levee in times of high water has been proposed.

The project fell within Section 205 authority under which the Corps of Engineers funds projects through the general category of small programs in priority order. The President in his 1977 budget request omitted all 205 programs.

I requested add-on appropriations to the budget in the amount of $450,000 for the Corps of Engineers full capability for planning, specifications, and initiation of construction. This is included in the approved measure.

The President also failed to include a request for small programs under the Section 107 act. The 10th District's Caruthersville Harbor Project was one of the existing programs under Section 107 of the 1960 River and Harbor Act which would have been discontinued as all earlier funds for the program are exhausted.

My recommendation for completion of a detailed project report in the amount of $54,000 was added to the bill.

Two projects which I had favorably recommended in earlier years were omitted from the President's FY 1977 budget request, but were put back in by the Congress.

Perry County Drainage Districts 1, 2 and 3 have the responsibility of draining 26,881 acres of rich farm land. My request was first approved in fiscal year 1974 and funds in the amount of $415,000 have been expended to date. It is now ready for construction. My request for the Corps of Engineers capability of $500,000 for the project was approved.

St. Marys, in Ste. Genevieve County, has received $85,000 for flood control work. This project was also among those omitted by the President. My approved request of $100,000 for a general investigation of the project in the fiscal year 1977 measure will allow the project to continue.

BLACK RIVER

Last year, my request for an add-on appropriations in the amount of $400,000 to snag Black River from Poplar Bluff to the Arkansas line and relieve flooding was approved. The people of the community advised that this was the means they wished to follow, as a feasibility flood control study would be too lengthy a process to consider.

My authorization request for a study on the matter had been approved but, to follow the wishes and desires of my constituents for prompt and immediate attention, I took the alternate route of getting add-on appropriations.

This project became controversial and could not be completed. The reason was due mainly to refusal of landowners along the river to give necessary easements and rights-of-way for the work.

In addition, key agencies of the state of Missouri do not support the project. The $400,000 has now been released for other projects that do have the full support of local interests.

ST. JOHNS BAYOU

An important project for Southeast Missouri is now pending before the House and Senate Committees on Public Works for authorization. The project, the St. Johns Bayou and New Madrid Floodway, is west of and adjacent to the New Madrid-Bird's Point Floodway.

It is bound on the north by the Commerce Hills and on the west by Sikeston Ridge. On the east we have the New Madrid-Bird's Point setback Levee and on the south a levee and gates.

The project is vital to the local people to prevent flood damage.

The Senate has held hearings on the topic and I appeared before the appropriate subcommittee to voice my strong support for authorization of this project. When the hearings are held by the House Public Works Subcommittee on Water Resources, late in August, I will again appear on behalf of the project.

After authorization, I intend to lend my full support in getting the necessary funds in fiscal year 1978 for beginning the work.

Upper and lower Little Black Watershed

For the past 10 years, work has been done to develop a plan for solving the soil and water related problems in the Little Black Watershed drainage area in Butler, Carter and Ripley Counties, Mo., and Clay County, Ark.

The Public Works Subcommittee on Water Resources held hearings earlier in the year to authorize a PL-566 small watershed project for construction to implement the project. I appeared before the subcommittee to urge favorable consideration for this program. It has now been authorized. It must now receive appropriations through the Department of Agriculture.

I intend to make this a priority matter when my Appropriations Subcommittee on Agriculture begins discussion of its fiscal year 1978 budget requests.

Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton serves on the Senate Appropriations Committee and has always been exceedingly successful in getting approved in the Senate projects placed in the House bill.

Concepts, figures are they right?

NEW YORK (AP) — As we in America become more dependent on computer-produced numbers to tell us the state of the economy, it behooves us from time to time to ask questions about those numbers.

If the numbers aren't correct, don't we risk making incalulably bad decisions? In investments, in tax policy, in politics?

As with any numerical products, the economic statistics that guide such decisions are only as good as the validity of the concepts involved, the correctness of techniques, and the quality of the raw data to be processed.

With this in mind, a person scanning the jobless figures for 1976 might have reason to pause and ponder. These figures, as popularly and officially used, are seasonally adjusted to offset temporary factors.

If we look at the raw data — that is, unadjusted — we find that there were 8,174,000 people without jobs in January 1976, but only 7,577,000 without jobs in June.

If we now look at the seasonally adjusted data we see a different story. In this column we find that there were only 7,290,000 without jobs in January, but that there were 7,426,000 unemployed in July.

Which way did unemployment go? Down, as in the raw count, or up, as in the seasonally adjusted figures? Do we accept the raw count, or instead, the formulation of the statisticians?

The official jobless rate is based on the adjusted figures. It is on this rate that governmental decisions are based, and the millions of voter and investor decisions.

It is also a rate that, based as it is on a somewhat arbitrary formula, at best is a good estimate. At the end of the year these adjusted figures are often revised, which is to say, corrected.

A simple set of numbers in the June 1976 issue of the Federal Reserve Bulletin also offers reason to reflect on statistical procedures. It refers to expansion in industrial production as an annual percentage.

From 1946 to 1963, the Fed reports, industrial production rose at an annual percentage of 4.2 per cent. And from 1963 to 1974, it states, the annual increase was 4.6 per cent.

But, combining the two periods the Fed reports that from 1946 to 1974 the annual percentage increase in industrial production was 4.7, a conclusion, you may note, that is greater than the components.

Moving on to the Index of Leading Indicators, we find here one of the most closely watched barometers of the economy — a barometer, not a thermometer — it is supposed to foretell, rather than measure past or present.

Beginning in late 1970, the index continued rising into the third quarter of 1974. Relying upon it, one economist after another forecast a continuation of expansion, even as the economy was falling apart.

Even the president of the United States was fooled or, to put it more accuately, his economic advisers were fooled.

These embarassed economists were just too trusting. Pierre Reinfret, the consulting economist, was too perplexed to let the matter rest and he thereby avoided some of the pits into which his colleagues fell.

Examining the figures, Reinfret concluded that the problem had to be with the concept. Most of the numbers in the index, he observed, were in value terms, such as the value of new construction.

This being so, obviously the index was inflated as badly as the dollar which was used to measure its components. The index was rising, and pointing to further expansion, because prices for everything were rising.

Deflated, the index clearly and accurately showed that trouble was brewing for the economy, trouble that came in the shape of the worst recession since the Great Depression of the 1930s.

Moral: When we get so used to the numbers that we don't check them out we can get into an awful lot of trouble.

Tax deductions go under fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional tax negotiators have extended existing general business tax cuts while deciding to retrict tax deductions for individuals using pa.t of their homes for business purposes.

These decisions were reached Wednesday by Senate-House tax conferees on their first day of work on a massive tax revision bill.

The conferees postponed votes on individual tax reductions and other major revenue matters and instead took up business and foreign income features of the bill.

As a step toward some tax simplification, the conferees approved a provision to allow taxpayers to deduct alimony payments whether or not they itemize deductions on their tax returns. Presently, this deduction is not allowed if a taxpayer uses the standard deduction.

The major business tax action involved two temporary tax cuts that the Senate had voted to make permanent. The Senate-House group decided to keep them on a temporary basis.

First, they agreed to extend the present 10 per cent investment tax credit through 1980. The 1975 Tax Reduction Act boosted the credit to 10 per cent for all firms for 1975 and 1976 only. Previously, it was 7 per cent for businesses and 4 per cent for public utilities.

The extension will cost the Treasury $1.3 billion in fiscal 1977, which begins Oct. 1, and will cost $2.2 billion by fiscal 1981.

The other temporary feature, designed to help smaller businesses, concerns corporate tax rate adjustments that the conferees agreed should stay on the lawbooks through 1977 at a cost to the Treasury of about $1.4 billion a year.

Under this provision, a business firm's first $25,000 of annual income is taxed at a 20 per cent rate, the next $25,000 at 22 per cent, and anything over $50,000 at 48 per cent.

The government, meantime, would gain about $220 million a year through the conferees' compromise plan to tighten deductions for taxpayers who do business at home.

It would mean a taxpayer could take a tax deduction for using part of the home on the job only if that part is used exclusively for business on a regular basis and only if it is the chief business place or site for seeing clients, customers or patients.

For an employe, business use of the home would qualify for a deduction only if the office there is set up for his employer's convenience.

Area flood control, drainage projects receive monies

By BILL D. BURLISON
10th District representative

WASHINGTON — Congress has just completed action on the Public Works Appropriations Bill for Fiscal Year 1977 and the President has signed the measure into law (PL 94-355). Numerous 10th District Corps of Engineers projects are included in the measure.

The Corps of Engineers is the President's arm in the area of Public Works. The Corps makes recommendations to the President and he, through his Office of Management and Budget, makes a final determination as to the funding to be included in the President's budget which is submitted to the Congress each January.

If the President does not recommend funds in his budget, the only way they can be obtained is by Congress, acting through its Committee on Appropriations, adding on these funds.

Little had been done until recent years to confront the critical drainage and flood control problems in the 10th District. Upon being named to the Committee on Appropriations, I immediately made this work of utmost priority. During the past few years flood control and drainage projects have been approved and added to the budget.

It was encouraging in pursuing the President's budget this year to see that funds to continue some of these programs were budgeted by the President. Others were added by me. A brief summary of projects is given below.

A considerable portion of Cape Girardeau County has been plagued for years by flooding. My recommendation of $200,000 to begin study of this situation was implemented during fiscal year 1975. Another $130,000 was approved in 1976, and $100,000 for general investigations is contained in the new bill (this is the Cape LaCroix or Cape-Jackson project).

For communities along the Mississippi River faced with flooding when the river rises, we have included monies in the following amounts.

Ste. Genevieve will receive $50,000 for continuation of its feasibility study previously funded in the amount of $120,000.

The Plattin Creek project, in Jefferson County, has received $100,000 during the past two years and will receive $50,000 for continuation of investigative studies in FY 1977.

Pine Ford Lake, a part of the Meramec Basin projects, received $650,000 in fiscal year 1976 and will receive $500,000 in fiscal year 1977 for planning.

The St. Louis Metropolitan area study for Missouri and Illinois will contain considerable work in the Arnold area in Jefferson County. The project received $470,000 in fiscal year 1976, and $165,000 for FY 1977 is in the bill for continuation of general investigations.

The St. Francis Basin drainage project encompasses work in Missouri and Arkansas. There is a constant and growing need for work on the drainage projects included in this area. Funds have been utilized in greater amounts the past few years. Work programmed to be done in fiscal year 1977 is in the following amounts for the enumerated projects:

ST. FRANCIS BASIN
8 County Bridges, Ditch 19, Item 1	$520,000	Dunklin
MO Hwy. "WW" Bridge Wappapello-Crowley's Ridge, Item 2	160,000	Stoddard
Land Acquisition Right-of-way for Castor River	400,000	Stoddard
Right-of-way for Ditch 19, Item 2	300,000	Dunklin
Right-of-way for Belle Fountain and Ditch No. 9	370,000	Pemiscot
Ditch 81 Extension Item 2, Part 2	500,000	(work done in Arkansas, but vital to SeMo
WAPPAPELLO LAKE
Funds for Operation and Maintenance	472,000	Wayne and Butler
Recreation Facilities (Code 710)	100,000	Wayne and Butler
MISSISSIPPI RIVER LEVEES
Bayouville, Mo. Parcel 1	350,000	New Madrid
Parcel 2	468,900	New Madrid and Mississippi
Above Dorena, Mo. Parcel 1	60,000	Mississippi
Parcel 2	285,000	Mississippi

Because of the critical need for work on Ditch 19 on the St. Francis Basin, I requested a line-item for an additional amount of $75,000 for which the Corps of Engineers had capability. This add-on item is contained in the approved bill.

Two additional items not included in the President's Budget within the 10th District which I strongly recommended for funding this year were approved in the proposal, i.e., Drinkwater Sewer and Caruthersville Port Authority.

The residents of Mississippi County have experienced severe flooding in past years. A pumping station at Drinkwater Sewer by means of which impounded runoff and seepage could be pumped over the Mississippi River Levee in times of high water has been proposed.

The project fell within Section 205 authority under which the Corps of Engineers funds projects through the general category of small programs in priority order. The President in his 1977 budget request omitted all 205 programs.

I requested add-on appropriations to the budget in the amount of $450,000 for the Corps of Engineers full capability for planning, specifications, and initiation of construction. This is included in the approved measure.

The President also failed to include a request for small programs under the Section 107 act. The 10th District's Caruthersville Harbor Project was one of the existing programs under Section 107 of the 1960 River and Harbor Act which would have been discontinued as all earlier funds for the program are exhausted.

My recommendation for completion of a detailed project report in the amount of $54,000 was added to the bill.

Two projects which I had favorably recommended in earlier years were omitted from the President's FY 1977 budget request, but were put back in by the Congress.

Perry County Drainage Districts 1, 2 and 3 have the responsibility of draining 26,881 acres of rich farm land. My request was first approved in fiscal year 1974 and funds in the amount of $415,000 have been expended to date. It is now ready for construction. My request for the Corps of Engineers capability of $500,000 for the project was approved.

St. Marys, in Ste. Genevieve County, has received $85,000 for flood control work. This project was also among those omitted by the President. My approved request of $100,000 for a general investigation of the project in the fiscal year 1977 measure will allow the project to continue.

BLACK RIVER

Last year, my request for an add-on appropriations in the amount of $400,000 to snag Black River from Poplar Bluff to the Arkansas line and relieve flooding was approved. The people of the community advised that this was the means they wished to follow, as a feasibility flood control study would be too lengthy a process to consider.

My authorization request for a study on the matter had been approved but, to follow the wishes and desires of my constituents for prompt and immediate attention, I took the alternate route of getting add-on appropriations.

This project became controversial and could not be completed. The reason was due mainly to refusal of landowners along the river to give necessary easements and rights-of-way for the work.

In addition, key agencies of the state of Missouri do not support the project. The $400,000 has now been released for other projects that do have the full support of local interests.

ST. JOHNS BAYOU

An important project for Southeast Missouri is now pending before the House and Senate Committees on Public Works for authorization. The project, the St. Johns Bayou and New Madrid Floodway, is west of and adjacent to the New Madrid-Bird's Point Floodway.

It is bound on the north by the Commerce Hills and on the west by Sikeston Ridge. On the east we have the New Madrid-Bird's Point setback Levee and on the south a levee and gates.

The project is vital to the local people to prevent flood damage.

The Senate has held hearings on the topic and I appeared before the appropriate subcommittee to voice my strong support for authorization of this project. When the hearings are held by the House Public Works Subcommittee on Water Resources, late in August, I will again appear on behalf of the project.

After authorization, I intend to lend my full support in getting the necessary funds in fiscal year 1978 for beginning the work.

Upper and lower Little Black Watershed

For the past 10 years, work has been done to develop a plan for solving the soil and water related problems in the Little Black Watershed drainage area in Butler, Carter and Ripley Counties, Mo., and Clay County, Ark.

The Public Works Subcommittee on Water Resources held hearings earlier in the year to authorize a PL-566 small watershed project for construction to implement the project. I appeared before the subcommittee to urge favorable consideration for this program. It has now been authorized. It must now receive appropriations through the Department of Agriculture.

I intend to make this a priority matter when my Appropriations Subcommittee on Agriculture begins discussion of its fiscal year 1978 budget requests.

Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton serves on the Senate Appropriations Committee and has always been exceedingly successful in getting approved in the Senate projects placed in the House bill.

Tax deductions go under fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional tax negotiators have extended existing general business tax cuts while deciding to retrict tax deductions for individuals using pa.t of their homes for business purposes.

These decisions were reached Wednesday by Senate-House tax conferees on their first day of work on a massive tax revision bill.

The conferees postponed votes on individual tax reductions and other major revenue matters and instead took up business and foreign income features of the bill.

As a step toward some tax simplification, the conferees approved a provision to allow taxpayers to deduct alimony payments whether or not they itemize deductions on their tax returns. Presently, this deduction is not allowed if a taxpayer uses the standard deduction.

The major business tax action involved two temporary tax cuts that the Senate had voted to make permanent. The Senate-House group decided to keep them on a temporary basis.

First, they agreed to extend the present 10 per cent investment tax credit through 1980. The 1975 Tax Reduction Act boosted the credit to 10 per cent for all firms for 1975 and 1976 only. Previously, it was 7 per cent for businesses and 4 per cent for public utilities.

The extension will cost the Treasury $1.3 billion in fiscal 1977, which begins Oct. 1, and will cost $2.2 billion by fiscal 1981.

The other temporary feature, designed to help smaller businesses, concerns corporate tax rate adjustments that the conferees agreed should stay on the lawbooks through 1977 at a cost to the Treasury of about $1.4 billion a year.

Under this provision, a business firm's first $25,000 of annual income is taxed at a 20 per cent rate, the next $25,000 at 22 per cent, and anything over $50,000 at 48 per cent.

The government, meantime, would gain about $220 million a year through the conferees' compromise plan to tighten deductions for taxpayers who do business at home.

It would mean a taxpayer could take a tax deduction for using part of the home on the job only if that part is used exclusively for business on a regular basis and only if it is the chief business place or site for seeing clients, customers or patients.

For an employe, business use of the home would qualify for a deduction only if the office there is set up for his employer's convenience.

All her life, Reita Lewis was shy — painfully shy. She didn't talk much at school, and her mother, Mrs. Sam Lewis of Sikeston Route Two, says her daughter would rather stay home the day of an oral report and take her chances of failing the assignment than get up in front of the entire class.

But last year, something happened to change all that. Reita, who joined the U.S. Army in Oct. of 1974, became the first female airborne instructor in the history of the Army.

At the time Reita took the airborne training, only 100 women had gone through airborne school, and none had gone on to become instructors. But any Army disbelievers were taken care of when Miss Lewis (now Sgt. Lewis) was the top graduate of her class, which contained few women, in April of 1975.

It was surprise to her family in some ways, because of her shyness. The thought of Reita barking out orders when she hardly spoke to persons outside the family for most of her life was difficult to accept.

But in other ways, Mrs. Lewis, who with her husband Sam, a retired farmer, has reared eight children, can see her five- foot, one- inch daughter in her new role.

Sgt. Lewis took her basic training in Alabama, and was then transferred to Maryland. She was encouraged by her older brother, Ken Lewis, now stationed with the U.S. Air Force in Korea, to go to airborne school.

After graduating from airborne school, Sgt. Lewis was assigned to a leg unit at Ft. Bragg, N. C. She wanted to be in an airborne unit, and only hesitated for a short time when Ft. Benning called and said they wanted her back as the first female airborne instructor. Unfortunately, Ft. Bragg wanted her too — so Sgt. Lewis took her case to the Pentagon and won the right to return to Ft. Benning.

As an instructor, Sgt. Lewis works out right along with the privates — men and women — as they train for an airborne unit. This includes running, strenuous drills, and showing them every stage of parachute jumping, from putting on their parachutes in the proper way to preventing themselves from stranging in the event — God forbid — of landing in a tree.

Sgt. Lewis, a 1974 graduate of Sikeston High School, went to school at Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau the summer after she graduated from high school, but decided she wanted something different.

Today, she's got it, and seems a bit awed at the new self-confidence she has found as an airborne instructor. She admits that many of the men in the Army, both instructors and students in the airborne school, were less than enthusiastic at first about having a woman in the ranks. But "Lew," as they called Sgt. Lewis, has earned their respect now and they accept her.

As a female instructor, Sgt. Lewis lives in separate barracks from the men. She also has her own locker, but to reach it she must walk through the men's locker room, so she "sounds off" a warning before entering.

She is allowed to date other instructors, but not the enlisted men. The same is true for male instuctors — they can date women instructors, but not female students in the school.

Sgt. Lewis' sister, Elaine, 13, visited her at Ft. Benning at Easter and gained some firsthand knowledge of the training involved. Elaine says her sister enjoys her work and will probably re-enlist next year when her first enlistment is over.

And although they made the training a little tougher because she was a woman, Sgt. Lewis has more than fulfilled the object of her schooling in the Army.

In addition to being the first female airborn instructor, she was the first woman to qualify for jumpmaster status. The jumpmaster is the one who keeps the line of parachuters on a plane in order and supervises their movements.

She is also a member of the Airborne- Air Assault Department's Parachute Demonstration Team, which means sh makes freefall jumps for post activities as well as community action events.

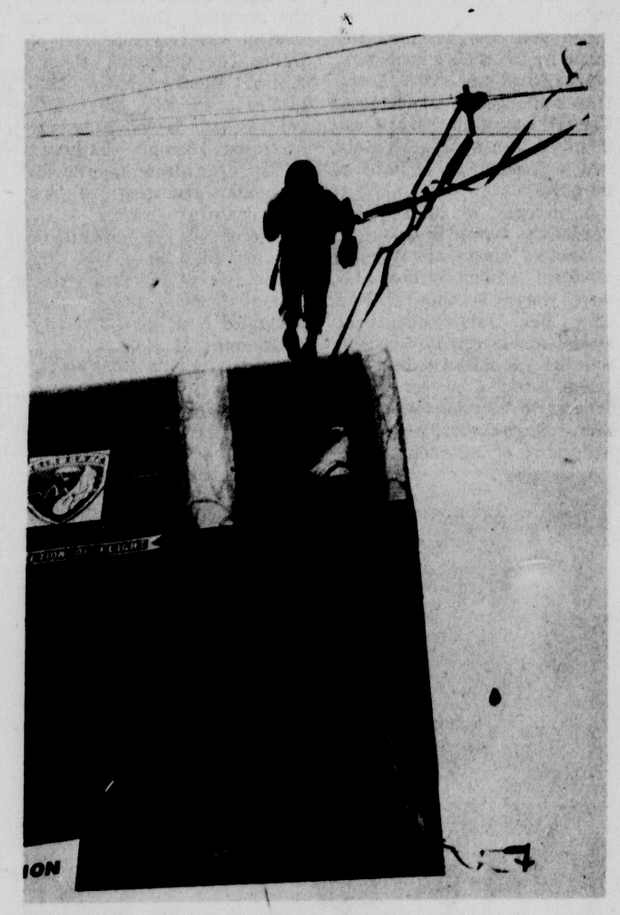
"And louder," says Elaine.

Sgt. Reita Lewis, a Sikeston native, was the first female airborne instructor for the U. S. Army.



It's a long way down from the top of this 34- foot tower students use in drills, but they are attached to a cable which pulls them up short after falling several feet. This exercise helps them become accustomed to the sensation of falling through the air.

A female private (whiskey) performs the door position she has been taught to use as Sgt. Lewis studies her form.

The door is a mock jump door used to simulate the door of the plane prachutists will use.

For a time, the male students were not thrilled at standing at attention for a female instructor. But Sgt. Lewis has won most of them over by doing her job well.

Fashion industry up on down

NEW YORK — (NEA) — It had to happen. With Seventh Avenue advocating the "blanket" look in coats and shawls, someone was bound to start thinking about pillows.

All those feathers just lying there, supporting idle dreams. It was time they were up and about, making the rounds. And not just in sleeping bags or skiwear, either.

Why not stuff them in the lining of an evening coat and send them to the opera? Or take them to the office inside a natty, reversible vest?

Which is exactly what designers Scott Barrie and Alice Blaine have done, independently of each other.

It was a down-filled comforter, though, and not a pillow, that got Alice Blaine's imagination racing. A Danish one, at that.

"I was in Copenhagen last year and my hotel had these big, white down comforters on the bed. It was bitter cold, but with the comforter, I could sleep with the windows open. That was the first time I ever encountered down."

She knew, of course, how popular down-filled active sportswear was. "At the same time," she says, "I felt those clothes in sporting goods stores had very little fashion to them."

So, feather in mind, she designed a reversible vest, wool flannel on one side, nylon on the other, and a boot-length, quilted sport coat. She stuffed both with enough northern goose down to warm but not roast and to keep the wearer from appearing inflated.

"We've sold about 600 of each and because the stores have a great demand for this kind of thing, we're going ahead with a parka, another vest and a pair of shorts."

The appeal, you see, lies not only in the look of it all, but the lightness and practicality.

"A wool coat with the interlining needed to be as warm as a down coat would be twice as heavy," she says. "And you can compress a down coat, roll it up in a suitcase and it springs right back."

Hers is made of water-proof urethane coated nylon on the outside, which comes in red, yellow, blue or black and a corresponding plaid cotton lining. It sells for $120; the vest for $60.

In both cases, the question is getting the feathers inside.

"If you opened up an old pillow, say, and tried to stuff those feathers into something else, they'd fly all over. So you have to send the garments to a blower or filling factory. They keep the feathers in big tanks and from there, they're blown into the channels or pockets of material which have been sewn on three sides.

"Then the channel is sealed with a stitch which isn't strong enough. Most of the filling factories are accustomed to dealing with bedding, etc., you see, as opposed to fashion. They buy prepared casings so they don't have to sew at all. That's why the garment is returned to our factory and refinished."

Another problem, says Scott Barrie, is that "those people are used to producing in quantity. They don't want to run only 500 dozen to start. But when you're making something that sells for $300-400 like my down-filled evening coat, you don't want to run off a great quantity."

That's why Barrie is hesitant about continuing with the down trend. "Only if I can find the right producer for the clothes. My evening jacket is selling, but it will take time for people to get used to it."

The jacket is made of silk taffeta, in purple or green lined with black, and sells for $240. Hardly an item bought on impulse.

"Barrie says he thought of using down as an interlining because "it's another way of doing a quilted look without having a fiber fill."

And that means the blanket-to-pillow theory doesn't wash in his case either. That's the nature of feathers for you: they're elusive.

Tested tips make packing a cinch

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Now that you've limped home from Europe, or the Orient or the Caribbean each arm half an inch longer from hauling luggage, here's just what you need: packing advice.

Well, there's always next year or next month. The principles themselves are timeless.

(Actually, her name is Joan Westberg and she's an actress from Chicago. "I'm the original Organized Woman for Mark Cross," she says. "They came up with the name Pamela Ashley because it sounds English. The firm was started in Boston in 1845 by a saddlemaker from England. If I leave, the name Pamela Ashley will provide continuity.")

To begin with, a woman should choose a soft-sided piece of luggage because "it's lightweight and expands. The added weight comes when the sides of a suitcase are molded."

The 26-inch suitcase she used for demonstration was made of canvas and leather and had no compartments inside. "If you don't fill up the compartments, you're left with empty spaces and you should pack a suitcase as full as you can. The more you put in, the more protection the clothes have."

Now, go to the closet and take out everything you're convinced you'll need. "Then put half of it back. Fashion-wise, it's best to work around one or two colors and to use lightweight clothes you can add layers to.

"In this suitcase, I have three skirts, one dress, two pairs of slacks, four tops and an evening dress. All the separates mix and match.

"Of course, you have to take into account the time you're spending, the distance and activities," she says. "If you're touring, you won't need as many clothes as you would at a resort."

Who's to know the outfit you wore this morning on the Champs Elysees is the same one you're wearing tonight — with different accessories — in Piccadilly Circus?

Toiletries and bulky items get packed first, except for aerosol cans and cosmetics which you'll carry in a separate tote. "The air pressure on planes will cause the aerosol cans to expand and you don't want them to burst in the cargo area. Don't forget to transfer anything in glass bottles to plastic bottles and only fill them three-fourth full."

Place the heaviest items — a hair dryer, for instance — opposite the handle of the suitcase "so when you lift the suitcase, they don't fall down on your crushables.

"You're already wearing walking shoes, so pack a pair of sandals if you need them, sneakers and evening shoes. Put your nylons, socks and jewelry pouches inside the shoes and then put the shoes in shoe mittens or plastic bags so they're cushioned and won't dirty your clothes."

When you've completed that initial layer, making sure there are no spaces ("I always have a lot of little stuffers like underwear sets to keep shoes from sliding around"), you take a piece of cardboard which you've cut to size and lay that on top."

Why?

"Because at your hotel, instead of unpacking everything to get to your toiletries, you simply lift out the cardboard with the clothes."

Her strategy for clothing is "fold and cushion." "The secret," she says, "is to have as few folds in your clothes as possible to prevent creases. You do this by protecting every fold with a rolled item: tissue paper, plastic bags, or all the garments you can roll such as scarves, sweaters, knits and jerseys."

She starts with the longest items first such as slacks and skirts. "I put one waistband against one side of the suitcase. Don't fold it; let the bottom hang out of the suitcase. I put the next waistband at the opposite side, letting the excess hang out and I go back and forth that way.

"On top, I put blouses and jackets. Incidentally, you fold a jacket inside out with the collar up and the sleeves flat against each other. Then you fold it in halves or thirds.

"Next, I take the rolled items and fill the spaces. When I have all the layers in, I just bring up the bottoms of the slacks and skirts and fold them across. There's no room for creases in them this way."

Make a list of everything you're taking for future reference, a check against leaving things behind, and, heaven forfend, "for your claim if the baggage is lost."

Finally, see to it that your business address is on the tag and not your home address. "You never know who's lurking in the airport to see which families are going away, leaving an empty house."

PAMELA ASHLEY: "Organized Woman for Mark Cross" tells women to put half the clothes they think they will need for a trip back in their closet.

Peas team up with veal stew

2 pounds cut-up boneless stewing veal
3 tablespoons flour
2 to 3 tablespoons oil
1 medium onion, cut in thin strips
1¼ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon paprika
1½ cups clear fat-free chicken broth
1 cup sliced celery
10-ounce package frozen tiny green peas

Coat veal with the flour. In a Dutch oven heat the oil; add veal and brown; remove veal. In the drippings in the Dutch oven brown the onion; stir in spices, then broth and celery. Replace veal in Dutch oven. Simmer, covered, until tender — about 1 hour. Skim off excess fat. Add peas and simmer, covered, just until they are tender. Makes 6 servings.

Don't forget to transfer anything in glass bottles to plastic bottles and only fill them three-fourth full."

Place the heaviest items — a hair dryer, for instance — opposite the handle of the suitcase "so when you lift the suitcase, they don't fall down on your crushables.

"You're already wearing walking shoes, so pack a pair of sandals if you need them, sneakers and evening shoes. Put your nylons, socks and jewelry pouches inside the shoes and then put the shoes in shoe mittens or plastic bags so they're cushioned and won't dirty your clothes."

When you've completed that initial layer, making sure there are no spaces ("I always have a lot of little stuffers like underwear sets to keep shoes from sliding around"), you take a piece of cardboard which you've cut to size and lay that on top."

Why?

"Because at your hotel, instead of unpacking everything to get to your toiletries, you simply lift out the cardboard with the clothes."

Her strategy for clothing is "fold and cushion." "The secret," she says, "is to have as few folds in your clothes as possible to prevent creases. You do this by protecting every fold with a rolled item: tissue paper, plastic bags, or all the garments you can roll such as scarves, sweaters, knits and jerseys."

She starts with the longest items first such as slacks and skirts. "I put one waistband against one side of the suitcase. Don't fold it; let the bottom hang out of the suitcase. I put the next waistband at the opposite side, letting the excess hang out and I go back and forth that way.

"On top, I put blouses and jackets. Incidentally, you fold a jacket inside out with the collar up and the sleeves flat against each other. Then you fold it in halves or thirds.

"Next, I take the rolled items and fill the spaces. When I have all the layers in, I just bring up the bottoms of the slacks and skirts and fold them across. There's no room for creases in them this way."

Don't forget, she says, to pack a flat clutch for evening use, and a collapsible flight bag "to take all your presents home in."

Make a list of everything you're taking for future reference, a check against leaving things behind, and, heaven forfend, "for your claim if the baggage is lost."

Finally, see to it that your business address is on the tag and not your home address. "You never know who's lurking in the airport to see which families are going away, leaving an empty house."

Peas team up with veal stew

2 pounds cut-up boneless stewing veal

1 teaspoon paprika
1½ cups clear fat-free chicken broth
1 cup sliced celery

Corn with a French accent

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Here is a recipe for a Franco-American dish — a lovely fresh corn souffle. Americans usually like the center of a souffle to be firm; the French usually prefer the center a little "runny" so it can serve as a sauce. Fortunately you can test for this crucial point. When you are ready to take the souffle out of the oven, insert a silver knife in the crack into the top. If the knife does not come out clean, the center will be soft. Should you want it firmer, bake the souffle a little longer.

For this souffle fresh corn has to be cut from the cob so it is "creamstyle." There are directions in the recipe for doing this with a sharp knife. But cooks who enjoy beautifully crafted utensils may be interested to know that there is a corn grater, said to be inspired by one used in pre-Revolutionary days, that does this job fast and efficiently. The grater is expensive ($12.00 plus postage and packing costs from California), but in our kitchen we find it indispensable.

FRESH CORN SOUFFLE
3 ears corn, husked
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
3 tablespoons cornstarch
1 cup milk, scalded
Salt
⅛ teaspoon white pepper
5 large eggs, separated

With a sharp knife cut off only the tips from the corn kernels; with the back of the knife scrape off the remaining pulp and juice; measure 1 cup of this "creamstyle" corn.

In a 2½-quart saucepan over low heat, melt the butter; stir in the cornstarch until smooth; remove from heat. Gradually stir in the milk (1 tablespoon at a time at first), keeping smooth. Stir in 1 teaspoon salt and the pepper. Over low heat, stirring constantly, cook until thickened and boiling. Off heat whisk the egg yolks, one at a time, into the hot sauce. Stir in the 1 cup corn.

Beat egg whites and ⅛ teaspoon salt until stiff peaks form. Stir a large spoonful of the beaten egg whites into the corn mixture to lighten it; gently fold in the remaining egg whites. Turn into an unbuttered 2-quart souffle dish.

Place in a preheated 400-degree oven; at once reduce heat to 350 degrees. Bake until greatly puffed and top is brown — 40 to 45 minutes. Serve at once.

Ghost time in Japan

By KAY TATEISHI

TOKYO (AP) — A soft zephyr chills the sweltering night, rustling the leaves of the weeping willows amidst the trickling sound of water. A pale blue light suddenly flashes in the darkness, followed by an eerie moan. Then a pale female face with long, stringy hair lights up like a full moon.

A spine-tingling whisper echoes "Woo-rah-meh-shi-ya-a-a!"

"Woo-rah-meh-shi-ya-a-a" means spite and woe, and most ghosts in Japan, according to tradition, return during the hot months, seeking sympathy and consolation.

It is ghost time in Japan again and, more than ever before, noted Japanese ghosts are making their annual popular appearances in Kabuki plays and vaudeville houses, in movies and television shows and on radio. Books on ghosts, the occult and fantasy are in great demand — as they have been for decades around the time of "Obon," the Buddhist festival for the dead.

Among the more popular ghosts is Okiku-san, a young maid who broke one of her master's 10 prize plates. He murdered her with his sword in a fit of anger and tossed her body into a well.

On a hot summer night she emerged from the well as a ghost and haunted her master by dropping his treasured ceramics into the well, counting "one plate, two plates, three plates . . ." until he went mad and took his own life.

Theaters employ a variety of gimmicks, including lights and sounds, to frighten the audience. There are rising and sinking platforms, floating ghosts, bouncing balls of fire, flashes of lightning and thunder.

In the small "yose," or vaudeville houses where the audience is brought close to the stage, the story teller relates his tale, employing the tricks of his trade — voice, face, motions — suddenly switches off the lights, then turns them on dimly. During the interval he has donned a wig and the mask of a ghost and glowers in the shadow of a glowing flickering candle light, moaning "woo-rah-meh-shi-ya-a-a!"

Canning experts give warning

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Many first-time home canners may get off to a bad start if they are using methods found in grandma's recipe book, caution food experts in several books. Grandma may have been a whiz at measurements, a pinch of this and a lump of that, but the leeway she took in home canning may not necessarily be safe.

For that matter, even methods to be found in older cookbooks and some printed in the '70s may be in error. So say food and nutrition specialists Louise W. Hamilton, Gerald D. Kuhn and Karen Rugh in a book, "Home Canning, The Last Word," they put together with editors of the Farm Journal.

That trio emphasizes that open kettle canning, canning by dishwasher — people do it — and canning with aspirin to change the acidity of food are unsafe practices. Then, too, some new jar lids that recently came on the market when lids were scarce do not "consistently seal or maintain a seal."

After considerable investigation, too, of the new tomato varieties and their relationship to a possible outbreak of botulism, it has been decided that home canned tomatoes spoil because heat sterilization time was too short, they say.

Open kettle canning, a method that is particularly popular with jelly makers — the food is cooked in open kettles and packed boiling hot in sterilized jars and quickly sealed — is no longer recommended, not even for jams and preserves, they point out, explaining "the unsafe practice has resulted in food spoilage and even botulism." It has been established that heating food in open kettles will not destroy spoilage organisms.

This knowledgeable group does not encourage sealing jams and jellies with paraffin, either. The natural acidity of the fruit plus sugar helps preserve these foods, but it doesn't prevent molds from developing and "we are just beginning to recognize hazards to humans and animals from eating mycotoxins produced by molds," they emphasize.

They also caution "never can anything in any kind of oven, conventional or microwave." Heat distribution is uneven so the center of some jars may never reach the sterilization point. Then, too, glass jars may not tolerate unbalanced high internal pressure in a dry oven and an explosion might result. Lids may not seal properly and metal (in jar lids) should not be used in microwave ovens.

Unlike acid foods — most fruits, tomatoes, sauerkraut and pickle — which may be safely canned in a boiling water canner, the low acid foods that support the growth of clostridium botulinum and other heat-resisting bacteria must be heat sterilized at temperatures higher than boiling water and only in a pressure canner, they maintain.

Low acid foods include asparagus, green or wax beans, beets, carrots, mushrooms, potatoes, soup, squash, tomato sauce with meat, chicken or rabbit, chopped meat, meat strips or cubes, sausage. The starchy low-acid foods — corn, lima beans, peas, pumpkin — and closely packed leafy vegetables such as spinach require even longer sterilizing times because heat penetrates more slowly and takes longer to reach a high enough temperature to sterilize foods in the center of the jar.

Even if safety precautions are observed, home canned vegetables, meats and poultry should be boiled at least 10 minutes before being tasted or served to destroy neurotoxins responsible for botulism, they point out.

It doesn't take more than a taste to kill, declare Hassell Bradley and Carole Sundberg in their well researched book, "Keeping Food Safe." They emphasize that controlled experiments at the University of Michigan have shown that one-trillionth part of a gram of pure botulism toxin is enough to kill.

Far more botulism poisoning is caused by improper home canning than commercial canning, they point out, and it isn't always the low acid foods that are responsible. There have been instances of poisoning from tomatoes, apricots, pears and peaches which had been grossly underprocessed, "thus allowing the growth of other micro-organisms to aid growth and toxin production."

This book, a guide to the handling, preparing, preserving, freezing and storing of food, is a storehouse of information for the cook who wants to know how long she can store hamburger and how to thaw foods without contaminating them. Poisons and infections and their symptoms are provided and life-saving rules are given. A chapter on how to choose meat and vegetables and how to store them is included.

Cooking School

Do your cakes fall? Does your souffle suffer? Are you tired of the same old casseroles? If the answer to any of the above questions is yes, or if you would just like a chance to watch someone else cook for awhile, then come to the Southern Kitchens Cooking School at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 2 at the Sikeston High School Field House.

The school is sponsored by Progressive Farmer Magazine and The Daily Standard. In addition to the fun of the show, several valuable door prizes, donated by particpating local merchants, will be given away. Each person attending will also be given a packet containing the school's recipe book, redeemable product coupons and food preparation tips.

Admission to the school is by ticket only. Tickets are free and can be obtained from many local merchants who are displaying the cooking school theme in their stores.

Join us Sept. 2, and find out what's cooking.

Bicentennial Facts

The British navy was probably stronger than the British army, yet it did not try very hard to blockade the American coast. It was obliged to transport troops and do convoy duty to keep them provisioned from home. It too had captains who preferred to take commercial prizes rather than fight warships. The primary effect of the British Navy, The World Almanac recalls, was to inflict hardship on the Americans by interrupting their trade, reducing their supplies of needed war material from France, and indirectly raising prices throughout the colonies.

Ann Landers

Couples should plan their retirement

Dear Ann Landers: I've just read one more letter to you about a retired couple. "She" complains because "he" tags along, stands outside closed doors and pesters her to death.

I wonder how many women, if they were retired from their homes, could find meaningful work in their husband's office or shop. Wouldn't THEY follow him around the house, peeping over his shoulder, trying to find a place for themselves?

Couples should work out an agreement BEFORE they retire. They should plan to share the household chores, and I don't mean just the garbage. Schedule marketing, laundry, window washing, etc. Retirement isn't all trips to the museums and excursions. It is a whole lot of togetherness -- 24 hours a day. And that's a heap o' living together, honey. -- Not There Yet, But I Have Plans

Dear Not There Yet: When YOU get there, I'll bet you'll handle it better than most. Thanks for a letter loaded with common sense.

Dear Miss Landers: Every now and then you include this subject in one of your columns, and I would greatly appreciate your doing so again.

This concerns personal habits of cleanliness. My husband has always refused to use a deodorant. He claims it gives him a rash. This from a Ph.D.!

I don't need advice on what to do because I intend to move into another bedroom shortly. But I would like to be able to wave your column under his nose when I issue my ultimatum because he claims I'm being unreasonable. So, will you please state in your column what you consider the normal amount of bathing? This goat that I'm married to won't be able to say I'm one of those nuts who uses soap daily. -- Stamford Reader

Dear Stam: It may be that a deodorant DOES give your husband a rash. This is not uncommon. But there are several hypo-allergenic deodorants he could use. All he need do is ask for one at he drugstore.

Every person -- man, woman, and child-- should bathe or shower every morning or night. Tell him there are hypo-allergenic soaps on the market, too. In fact, go out and buy some -- as a favor to yourself as well as to him.

Don't miss Ann Landers' piece in the September issue of family circle, now on sale at all newsstands. The title: "Do Your Kids a Favor – Say NO!" If you feel your kid are getting the best of you, this article can be immensely helpful.

Canning experts give warning

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Many first-time home canners may get off to a bad start if they are using methods found in grandma's recipe book, caution food experts in several books. Grandma may have been a whiz at measurements, a pinch of this and a lump of that, but the leeway she took in home canning may not necessarily be safe.

For that matter, even methods to be found in older cookbooks and some printed in the '70s may be in error. So say food and nutrition specialists Louise W. Hamilton, Gerald D. Kuhn and Karen Rugh in a book, "Home Canning, The Last Word," they put together with editors of the Farm Journal.

That trio emphasizes that open kettle canning, canning by dishwasher — people do it — and canning with aspirin to change the acidity of food are unsafe practices. Then, too, some new jar lids that recently came on the market when lids were scarce do not "consistently seal or maintain a seal."

After considerable investigation, too, of the new tomato varieties and their relationship to a possible outbreak of botulism, it has been decided that home canned tomatoes spoil because heat sterilization time was too short, they say.

Open kettle canning, a method that is particularly popular with jelly makers — the food is cooked in open kettles and packed boiling hot in sterilized jars and quickly sealed — is no longer recommended, not even for jams and preserves, they point out, explaining "the unsafe practice has resulted in food spoilage and even botulism." It has been established that heating food in open kettles will not destroy spoilage organisms.

This knowledgeable group does not encourage sealing jams and jellies with paraffin, either. The natural acidity of the fruit plus sugar helps preserve these foods, but it doesn't prevent molds from developing and "we are just beginning to recognize hazards to humans and animals from eating mycotoxins produced by molds," they emphasize.

They also caution "never can anything in any kind of oven, conventional or microwave." Heat distribution is uneven so the center of some jars may never reach the sterilization point. Then, too, glass jars may not tolerate unbalanced high internal pressure in a dry oven and an explosion might result. Lids may not seal properly and metal (in jar lids) should not be used in microwave ovens.

Unlike acid foods — most fruits, tomatoes, sauerkraut and pickle — which may be safely canned in a boiling water canner, the low acid foods that support the growth of clostridium botulinum and other heat-resisting bacteria must be heat sterilized at temperatures higher than boiling water and only in a pressure canner, they maintain.

Low acid foods include asparagus, green or wax beans, beets, carrots, mushrooms, potatoes, soup, squash, tomato sauce with meat, chicken or rabbit, chopped meat, meat strips or cubes, sausage. The starchy low-acid foods — corn, lima beans, peas, pumpkin — and closely packed leafy vegetables such as spinach require even longer sterilizing times because heat penetrates more slowly and takes longer to reach a high enough temperature to sterilize foods in the center of the jar.

Even if safety precautions are observed, home canned vegetables, meats and poultry should be boiled at least 10 minutes before being tasted or served to destroy neurotoxins responsible for botulism, they point out.

It doesn't take more than a taste to kill, declare Hassell Bradley and Carole Sundberg in their well researched book, "Keeping Food Safe." They emphasize that controlled experiments at the University of Michigan have shown that one-trillionth part of a gram of pure botulism toxin is enough to kill.

Far more botulism poisoning is caused by improper home canning than commercial canning, they point out, and it isn't always the low acid foods that are responsible. There have been instances of poisoning from tomatoes, apricots, pears and peaches which had been grossly underprocessed, "thus allowing the growth of other micro-organisms to aid growth and toxin production."

This book, a guide to the handling, preparing, preserving, freezing and storing of food, is a storehouse of information for the cook who wants to know how long she can store hamburger and how to thaw foods without contaminating them. Poisons and infections and their symptoms are provided and life-saving rules are given. A chapter on how to choose meat and vegetables and how to store them is included.

Cooking School

Do your cakes fall? Does your souffle suffer? Are you tired of the same old casseroles? If the answer to any of the above questions is yes, or if you would just like a chance to watch someone else cook for awhile, then come to the Southern Kitchens Cooking School at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 2 at the Sikeston High School Field House.

The school is sponsored by Progressive Farmer Magazine and The Daily Standard. In addition to the fun of the show, several valuable door prizes, donated by particpating local merchants, will be given away. Each person attending will also be given a packet containing the school's recipe book, redeemable product coupons and food preparation tips.

Admission to the school is by ticket only. Tickets are free and can be obtained from many local merchants who are displaying the cooking school theme in their stores.

Join us Sept. 2, and find out what's cooking.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

The British navy was probably stronger than the British army, yet it did not try very hard to blockade the American coast. It was obliged to transport troops and do convoy duty to keep them provisioned from home. It too had captains who preferred to take commercial prizes rather than fight warships. The primary effect of the British Navy, The World Almanac recalls, was to inflict hardship on the Americans by interrupting their trade, reducing their supplies of needed war material from France, and indirectly raising prices throughout the colonies.

Ann Landers

Couples should plan their retirement

Dear Ann Landers: I've just read one more letter to you about a retired couple. "She" complains because "he" tags along, stands outside closed doors and pesters her to death.

I wonder how many women, if they were retired from their homes, could find meaningful work in their husband's office or shop. Wouldn't THEY follow him around the house, peeping over his shoulder, trying to find a place for themselves?

Couples should work out an agreement BEFORE they retire. They should plan to share the household chores, and I don't mean just the garbage. Schedule marketing, laundry, window washing, etc. Retirement isn't all trips to the museums and excursions. It is a whole lot of togetherness -- 24 hours a day. And that's a heap o' living together, honey. -- Not There Yet, But I Have Plans

Dear Not There Yet: When YOU get there, I'll bet you'll handle it better than most. Thanks for a letter loaded with common sense.

Dear Miss Landers: Every now and then you include this subject in one of your columns, and I would greatly appreciate your doing so again.

This concerns personal habits of cleanliness. My husband has always refused to use a deodorant. He claims it gives him a rash. This from a Ph.D.!

I don't need advice on what to do because I intend to move into another bedroom shortly. But I would like to be able to wave your column under his nose when I issue my ultimatum because he claims I'm being unreasonable. So, will you please state in your column what you consider the normal amount of bathing? This goat that I'm married to won't be able to say I'm one of those nuts who uses soap daily. -- Stamford Reader

Dear Stam: It may be that a deodorant DOES give your husband a rash. This is not uncommon. But there are several hypo-allergenic deodorants he could use. All he need do is ask for one at he drugstore.

Every person -- man, woman, and child-- should bathe or shower every morning or night. Tell him there are hypo-allergenic soaps on the market, too. In fact, go out and buy some -- as a favor to yourself as well as to him.

Don't miss Ann Landers' piece in the September issue of family circle, now on sale at all newsstands. The title: "Do Your Kids a Favor -- Say NO!" If you feel your kid are getting the best of you, this article can be immensely helpful.

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have read that the hardened oils in margarine are just as high in cholesterol as the animal fat in butter. What is your opinion of beating vegetable oil into butter to make a soft spread? Would this cut down on the cholesterol problem?

DEAR READER — Cholesterol is not fat and fat is not cholesterol. There is no cholesterol in any margarine made only with vegetable products. Hardening vegetable oils by adding hydrogen to the unsaturated fats converts them to saturated fats. One of the purposes of using a vegetable margarine is to decrease the saturated fat intake. A high saturated fat intake may cause the body to produce excess amounts of cholesterol whether the saturated fats come from animal or vegetable products.

You can improve both butter and vegetable margarine by beating in a polyunsaturated fat. I use one of the corn oil margarines mixed with safflower oil. Two small tubs of margarine are mixed with one tub of safflower oil. You can improve its butter flavor then by seasoning to your taste with imitation butter flavored salt. You can usually find that with the spices at the supermarket. If you want it to be more solid like ordinary margarine you can keep it stored in the freezing compartment of your refrigerator.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Since I was a small child I have had those ugly white patches of skin on my body — a pigment problem. Also my hair is white in places. My mother said that I was not born that way but developed it when I was 6 years old and started school. I have always been told to just live with it, but I wish those people had to. If there is something for it I really would like to know — a special diet — a vitamin — shots or anything. Any information you can give me will be appreciated.

DEAR READER — You probably have vitilago which means a failure of the skin to form pigment in spots. This results in lard-white spots that are particularly noticeable in dark complexioned people. It is not dangerous and is important only from a cosmetic point of view.

Treatment certainly leaves something to be desired, but some people with this condition get help from treatment with a medicine called Oxsoralen (methoxsalen). After taking the medicine by mouth the patient is exposed to sunlight or to artificial light sources that induce the same effect in shorter periods.

What's the law?
The case of the eager spouses

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Mr. and Mrs. Eager believed in being spontaneous. And so, while entertaining a friend one evening, the Eagers looked eagerly across the dinner table at each other—and before the guest knew what was happening, they suddenly rushed at each other and began to engage in an exotic sexual act.

When the authorities heard about it, Mr. and Mrs. Eager were arrested on charges based upon their X-rated performance.

"That may be true generally," responded the prosecuting attorney, "but not when it's served up as an entree to a dinner guest. While it may be titillating, it's not your normal bill of fare."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you convict the sexy spouses of a crime?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held (with two dissents) that the constitutional privacy afforded a husband and wife cannot be claimed when a third party is invited to join them. Once they welcome a stranger into their home to watch them engage in sex, noted the judge, be there one, 50 or 100 strangers, they cannot selectively assert that the state is a constitutionally forbidden intruder.

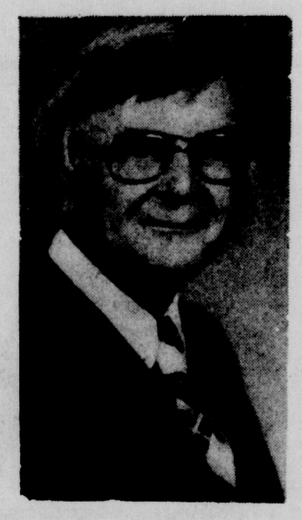
Gospel questions men



Dr. Arthur Fulbright

FULBRIGHT

I believe the gospel of Jesus Christ is asking questions of us men. "Do I have to have a marriage where my wife is an accessory-like satellite, or do I welcome her identity as being through herself as my identity is through myself?"

"Am I willing to be a nurturing parent of our children, or do I see this role as women's work?"

"Can I move toward the reality of wider choices, not only for women in general, but for my wife in particular?" I find myself as concerned with my wife's development as a person as my own, and this means nitty-gritty tasks like car pooling and taking my share of domestic responsibilities.

By my doing so, she is able to pursue her own goals. The freeing of anyone's human potential is an enlargement of my potential as well.

The Christian marriage is when two become one-not one in identity-(that's been the problem)-but one in a common effort to embrace and reinforce each other's identity and autonomous selfhood. For in Jesus Christ there are neither male nor female mystiques, but male and female human beings-sacred in the sight of God.

'Drive-In' brings pandemonium to screen

Glenn Morshower is a shy 16- year- old and Lisa Lemole is a teen-aged femme fatale in "Drive-In." The contemporary comedy, a Columbia Pictures release, focuses on a single wild night at a small- town drive- in theater.

It is early Friday afternoon and Orville Henningson (GLENN MORSHOWER) picks up his kid brother, Little Bit (GARY CAVAGNARO) from school and drives to the rollerskating rink. Little Bit berates his brother for not "getting it on" with girls; he says he wants to learn about sex from Orville's mistakes. Orville shrugs him off, explaining that "it'll all come naturally."

At the skating rink, Glowie (LISA LEMOLE) and her girl friends Willa Mae (CARLA PALMER) and Betty, Jr. (CARRIE JESSUP) play up to Orville, but he ignores them.

Glowie is paged on the rink's public address system and goes outside to find her boyfriend, Enoch (BILLY MILLIKEN), leader of the Widow Makers gang, in his customized van. Enoch tells her their date that night is off because there's going to be a rumble at the Alamo Drive-In Theater with the Gear Grinders, a rival gang.

Back inside the rink, Glowie watches as Orville wins two tickets to the drive-in which is featuring "Disaster '76," a disaster-film-to-end-all-disaster-films. Since Enoch has ditched her, Glowie asks Orville to meet her at the drive-in.

As he drives home, dazed by the flush of romance, Orville rams Enoch's van, tearing off one of the doors. Little Bit doesn't allow him to stop, and Enoch swears to make Orville pay dearly.

Meanwhile, at the Alamo Drive-In, the manager (LOUIS ZITO) and his cashier (LINDA LARIMER) prepare for the evening's business, unaware that they are being watched closely by Gifford (TREY WILSON) and Will Henry (GORDON HURST), who plan to hold-up the theater.

Among the Alamo's early arrivals are Bill Hill (KENT PERKINS) and Mary Louise (ASHLEY COX). Bill has purchased an engagement ring and hopes to convince her that she should marry him.

On the Alamo Drive-In screen, the terrifying spectacle of disaster followed by more disaster begins to unfold. Enoch's van drives from lane to lane, looking for the Gear Grinders, and finally parks. Glowie, Willa Mae and Betty, Jr. sit together in their car, spiking their colas with vodka. Little Bit creeps throughout the darkened drive-in, peeking at the action taking place in the parked cars. Orville finds Glowie and they go to his car but when he doesn't respond to her advances, Glowie leaves.

On the way back to her friends, Glowie is caught by three of the Widow Makers — Alabam (LEE NEWSOM), Backwoods (ANDY PARKS) and Spoon (REGAN KEE) — who take her to Enoch. When she reveals that she was with Orville, he mistreats her. In retaliation, she takes Enoch's knife and puts a hole in his waterbed, unleashing a tidal wave that washes him out of the van.

'Super Stars' to be shown Friday night

Paul Anka hosts "'The Midnight Special SuperStars," which features the music of three of the most consistently popular acts in the business — The Beatles, Elvis Presley and Bob Dylan. Their trio of "Midnight Special Hits of the Week" — "Hey Jude," "Don't Be Cruel" and "Like a Rollin' Stone" — are among the biggest sellers in the history of rock music.

In addition, there will be appearances by: Elton John: "Bennie and the Jets," The Carpenters: "Please Mister Postman" and "Superstar,"; Joan Baez: "The Night They Drove Old Dixie Down," Frankie Valli and the Four Seasons sing a medley of their hits;

The Bee Gees sing a medley of their biggest hits; Chuck Berry: "Johnny B. Goode,' 'Roll Over Beethoven" and "Memphis"; Chubby Checker: "The Twist" and "Pony Time"; The late Jim Croce: "Big, Bad LeRoy Brown."; Bill Haley and his Comets: "Rock Around the Clock," Johnny Rivers: "Poor Side of Town," Dion: 'Runaround Sue";

Rod Taylor to appear in movie

Rod Taylor stars as Evan Thorpe, head of a pioneer family who decide to pack their belongings, head West to seek free land and a better way of life, in "The Oregon Trail," an NBC World Premiere movie to be colorcast on "NBC Thursday Night at the Movies" Sept. 2 (8-10 p.m. DST; repeat of 1-10-76).

The action- adventure also stars David Huddleston, Blair Brown, Douglas V. Fowley, G. D. Spradlin, Andrew Stevens, Tony Becker, Gina Marie Smika.

Shortly after widower Evan Thorpe remarries, he takes his new wife, Jessica, his father, and his three children — William, Andrew and Rachel — along with their most precious belongings and heads westward in a wagon to start a new life.

Along with other families that share the same dream, they follow a trail that stretches from the Missouri River to the Willamette Valley, a 2,000 mile trek over plains, deserts, canyons and mountains.

They encounter the hardships of the trail — Indian attacks, illnesses and the loss of loved ones. Despite these hardships, they persevere. And when others in the wagon train give up hope and turn back, Thorpe considers the risks and dangers to his family and entertain thoughts of joining the returnees.

"Are We Losing Our Minds?" will be the theme of four provocative "Tomorrow" programs devoted to mental health, including an examination of life behind the walls of a state mental institution, prevailing cures for mental illness, and interviews with patients and psychiatric personnel.

These four in-depth programs, hosted by Tom Snyder, will be colorcast on NBC-TV (1-2 a.m. NYT) following the Aug. 30-Sept. 2 telecasts of "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson."

On the two opening programs, Monday, Aug. 30 and Tuesday, Aug. 31, "Tomorrow" will visit the Rockland Psychiatric Center (formerly known as Rockland State Mental Hospital) in Orangeburg, N.Y., for a sympathetic yet unsparing scrutiny of a public mental institution. Snyder will conduct interviews with the hospital's director, Dr. Hyman Pleasure, patients both voluntary and involuntary, parents of patients and the hospital's nurses and attendants.

For the concluding two programs in the mental health series, "Tomorrow" will return to its New York studio. On Wednesday, Sept. 1, the subject will be recovering from a mental illness. Snyder's guests will be former patients of various psychiatric institutions. They will discuss their treatments and present state of mind.

On Thursday, Sept. 2, the program will examine the subject, "Can All Mental Illness Be Cured?" The guests, who will include Dr. Dean K. Brooks, superintendent of the Oregon State Mental Hospital, Salem, Ore., the setting for the book and the Academy Award-winning film version of "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," will discuss the various cures for mental illness.

Burt Lancaster stars in "The Midnight Man," a mystery drama involving the investigation of a triple homicide that is linked to efforts to blackmail a prominent senator, on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" September 4 (9-11:15 p.m. NYT; repeat of 1-17-76). Susan Clark and Cameron Mitchell also star.

Lancaster portrays Jim Slade, a former police officer who returns to a small South Carolina town after serving a prison sentence for shooting his former wife's lover.

Slade finds a job as a security guard on a local college campus and very quickly becomes involved in the burglary of potentially incriminating tapes from a psychological counselor. One of the tapes has information on Natalie Claybourne, the daughter of a local senator.

Within days, the young woman, her boyfriend and her father's secretary are slain. Soon thereafter, the senator becomes the subject of a blackmail attempt. Slade rejects the confession of a janitor and investigates the case on his own.

Herschel Bernardi stars as druggist in "Newman's Drugstore"

Herschel Bernardi stars as Charlie Newman, a Depression-era druggist who also serves as the neighborhood social leader, philosopher and doctor in "Newman's Drugstore," a comedy to be colorcast Monday, August 30 (8:30-9 p.m. NYT), on NBC-TV.

Newman and his teen-aged son, Woody, are struggling to survive during the Depression, as is everyone else who comes into Newman's drugstore. But Newman's sister-in-law, Cheryl, and her husband have escaped the economic disaster and want to raise Woody with "all the benefits" of their relatively wealthy environment. Herschel Bernardi stars as druggist in "Newman's Drugstore"

Herschel Bernardi stars as Charlie Newman, a Depression-era druggist who also serves as the neighborhood social leader, philosopher and doctor in "Newman's Drugstore," a comedy to be colorcast Monday, August 30 (8:30-9 p.m. NYT), on NBC-TV.

Newman and his teen-aged son, Woody, are struggling to survive during the Depression, as is everyone else who comes into Newman's drugstore. But Newman's sister-in-law, Cheryl, and her husband have escaped the economic disaster and want to raise Woody with "all the benefits" of their relatively wealthy environment. Charlie and Woody soon discover, however, that love is far more important than money to a growing boy's well-being.

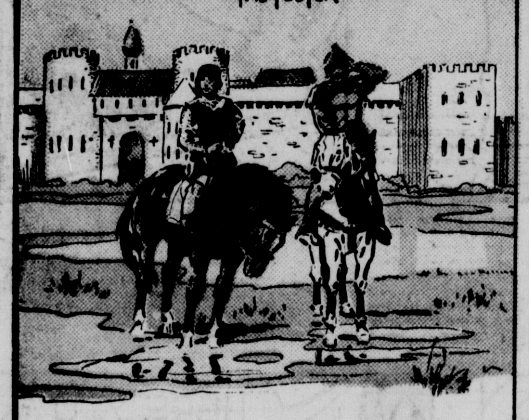
Prince Valiant

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

by HAL FOSTER



Our Story: THE BATTLEFIELD IS INSPECTED. "IT IS DRY ENOUGH," SAYS KING TELEMON, "WE WILL FORM OUR BATTLE LINES HERE AT DAWN."

THEN HE RETURNS TO THE CITY WHERE, ALL THROUGH THE STORM, A FLOATING BRIDGE HAS BEEN CONSTRUCTED.

FAR UP THE RIVER IT IS ASSEMBLED AND TELEMON LEADS HIS MEN ACROSS TO KASOV'S SIDE. THEY ARE MOSTLY GUARDS, SENTRIES AND WORKMEN, BUT WITH BANNERS WAVING THEY LOOK IMPRESSIVE.

TRUMPETS SOUND, THE GATES SWING OPEN AND KING KASOV RIDES FORTH AT THE HEAD OF HIS MERCENARIES, DETERMINED TO SHOW THAT UPSTART TELEMON A THING OR TWO ABOUT WAR.

HE HAD EXPECTED A HARD FIGHT FOR THE BRIDGE THAT LINKED THE TWO KINGDOMS BUT THE FORCES UNDER PRINCE VALIANT HAVE REMAINED AT A DISTANCE, SO HE SENDS HIS TROOPS STORMING ACROSS.

BEFORE THEY CAN ORGANIZE THEIR BATTLE LINE, VAL'S TROOPS CHARGE STRAIGHT FOR THE BRIDGEHEAD. AFTER HEAVY FIGHTING THE BRIDGE IS SECURED. KASOV HAS BEEN SHOUTING ORDERS TO HIS ARMY ACROSS THE RIVER WHEN THE SOUND OF A TRUMPET CALLS HIS ATTENTION TO THE APPROACH OF TELEMON'S TROOPS..... ON HIS SIDE OF THE RIVER.

LIKE ANY GREAT WAR LEADER, KASOV CAN MAKE QUICK DECISIONS. HE DECIDES TO GET INSIDE THE CITY GATES, QUICKLY!

LETTER OF THOUGHT

DEAR HELOISE:

It burns me up to hear people brag and play on other people's names and ancestry.

Bushwah! Why brag because you WERE (past tense) kin to successful people? Those who do never did anything to make 'em successful. Agree?

Olen Epstein

Agree all the way, sir. And you said it beautiously...

A WOOLY TALE

DEAR HELOISE:

As a young working wife, I have found that things can get very hectic, so I thought I'd pass along a discovery of mine which may help others.

One evening, quite late, I decided to wear my heavy turtleneck sweater to work the next day, but I found that it was dirty. I hand-washed it and was going to hang it up, but knew from experience it would never dry by morning.

I spread it on a bath towel, making sure it was flat and shaped correctly. Then I placed another towel on top of it and starting at the neck, walked all over the sweater, making sure I covered all parts twice.

A Heloise Fan

PLANTER'S TRICK

DEAR HELOISE:

If you have old clay pots, one way to brighten them up is to wind rope twine around them.

Here's how: first spread any kind of glue on the outside of the pot and about an inch down inside the pot.

This idea is inexpensive too.

KNOTS OF LUCK!

DEAR HELOISE:

To loosen knots in rope, cord or fabric, use mechanic's pliers.

S.E. Dudley

ALL TIED UP

DEAR HELOISE:

My husband had a round swivel tie rack he was not using. So he put it up in the kitchen by the stove where we have kitchen utensils hung on it.

Works great!

Florence Burgi

MAKES SENSE

DEAR HELOISE:

To make a sweet-smelling room, I put some perfume on a bit of cotton and fasten the cotton to a lamp shade.

Turn on the light and wait a few minutes. You will smell the pleasant scent of the perfume.

A TIP ON PAINT

DEAR HELOISE:

I find that an ordinary cotton swab serves as an excellent device to paint around the window-lock area.

It will do neat work, save frayed tempers and is easily disposed of after usage.

Jim Barth

A STICKY PROBLEM

DEAR HELOISE:

A little trick my husband taught me: when an egg sticks to the carton, soak the carton with a bit of water for a few minutes.

F.K.S.

THE JEWEL BOX

DEAR HELOISE:

My sister and I are always fighting about who owns what jewelry. I came upon a good way to stop the fighting.

I took nail polish (pink for me and purple for her) and painted the necklace hooks and the back of rings with our own color. No more fights!

DEAR HELOISE:

Did you ever wonder what to do with the extra dining room-table leaves when not in use?

While redecorating my dining room, I had to move these leaves from one place to another (I kept them in back of a door.) That's when I thought of this...

These leaves are usually about 12 inches wide and 40 inches long. Just buy sets of wall brackets that hold shelves and simply lay these table leaves on them when not in use. Mine are only used about three times a year.

These "shelves" can be hung in a kitchen for extra appliances, or in a den for stereo records or books, even on a porch for planters, etc. Just protect the leaves with a nice covering.

My! Oh, my! I think this is simply sensational!

Those table leaves are always a problem to store at my house and I never have enough shelves, especially in my sewing room.

Dear friend, you've just "killed two birds with one stone"! Thanks!

Heloise

IT'S A DRAIN!

DEAR HELOISE:

Have you had difficulty cleaning your dish drainer?

Spray it with any of the foam bathroom cleaners. Let stand for 10 or 15 minutes and all the dirt in the small crevices you can't usually get to, even with a brush, will rinse right off.

Give a second spray if necessary.

I was at my wit's end trying to keep mine clean. One day while cleaning the bathroom, I thought if it would foam away mold on a wall, maybe it will clean the dish drainer and it really did the job.

Mrs. Grace Blankenship

TICKLE YOUR RIBS

DEAR HELOISE:

One umbrella has lasted me for years even though several ribs have been broken. Here's how to repair them:

Cut a wire coat hanger and straighten it out. Tape it, with vinyl tape, to the broken rib in four or five places.

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Collar is missing. 2. Stripes are different. 3. Neckline is different. 4. Bottle is missing. 5. Arm is repositioned. 6. Newspaper is different.

Hal Kaufman's JUMOR WHIRL®

BULLETIN BOARD

●GOOD GRIEF! A questionable authority says it is a good idea for parents to pay their children for being good. Why's that? Give up? Because, otherwise, they'd be good for nothing.

●Answer quickly, if you can: How many 7 x 10 sheets of paper can be cut from a 21 x 30 sheet? Time limit: 30 seconds.

Nine sheets.

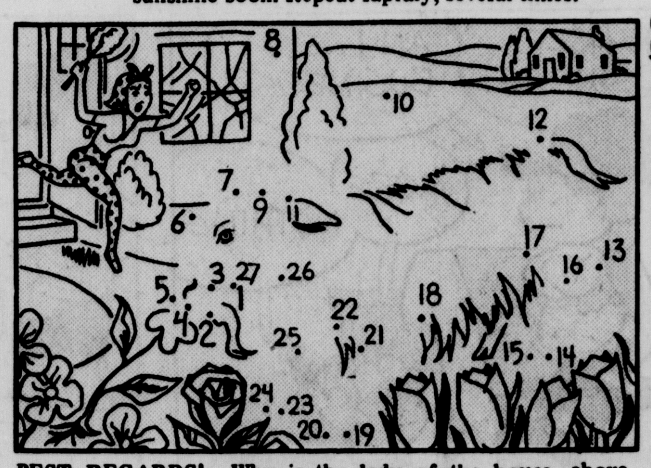
Begin anywhere on the board. Cross out that square and proceed with moves until all squares are touched.

In case you have forgotten, a knight's move in chess is two squares vertically or horizontally plus one square to the side. Example: A to G is one such move; A to J is another. (ABC's are for identification purposes only.)

One possible answer: E to C to L to F to D to K to B to I to G to A to J to H.



PEST REGARDS! Why is the lady of the house, above, up in arms? To find out, connect dots 1 to 2 to 3, etc.

8-29 (© 1976 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

SPELLBINDER!

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

- - - - - - - -

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.
Try to score at least 50 points.

Possible anagram: Life, base.
